Monkey Super-Men.
This Is Fire Week.
The Richest Don't Shoot.
Industry and Science.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1927.)

PROFESSOR VORONOFF has made old men seem younger with the help of monkey glands, has made science take him seriously.

Now he proposes to create super-men, such as Nietzsche dreamed of, by using animal glands on young children of exceptional talent. He believes that he will create genius such as earth never saw, in the children of children thus treated. The old-fashioned will believe that if monkeys could help create finer men, nature and wise providence would have called on the monkeys long ago.

ALSO a race of super-men is just what the world does NOT want. Tall men like short women, thin women admire fat men, genius marries mediocrity, all proof that nature wants us to march along side by side about even, not a few far ahead of the others, or riding on the backs of inferiors.

THIS is fire prevention week. Fire destroys more than five hundred million of property yearly. Carelessness with matches, cigarets, imperfect electric wiring, etc., causes more than $300,000,000 of the loss. That amount, which could be saved, would pay the cost of our national building program, power, irrigation, canals from lakes to ocean and Mississippi flood control, in a few years.

LAWS should discourage carelessness. Imprisonment for life with no credit for good behavior nonsense, should punish incendiarists. Property owners insure for full value, or more, and then neglect fire precautions.

Proof of such neglect sought out by paid officials should cancel insurance automatically, and keep it cancelled for three to five years. If that happened, fewer tenement house fires would happen. The landlord would sit up.

PREMIER BALDWIN says Britain and America will never fight. They may not always agree, but they will thresh out differences, or differ like friends and gentlemen. It's a safe prediction, for various reasons. If Britain and America fought, that hideous stupidity would put the world back five hundred years, and financially speaking, ruin both countries.

IN addition, Britain and America have all they want and more than they want. Why should they fight? Ford, Rockefeller, Baker, Mellon are the four richest men in the world.

Can you imagine them going after each other with automatics, mustard bombs, etc.? They compete, fight hard for business and just a few more hundreds of millions, to make the game amusing. But they don't shoot.

GREAT industries, not content with gigantic production, work constantly to produce better methods, of which the public gets the benefit. Standard Oil spends on research work, producing no immediate profit, more money every year than Mr. Rockefeller had when he was already considered a very rich man.

THE tube works department of United States Steel, making annually thousands of miles of steel and iron pipe for every conceivable purpose, spends large sums on the fight against erosion, studying, testing methods for protecting iron against rust and destruction by chemicals in the ground.

It costs millions to renew pipe lines for the great oil companies every year. Find a way to protect iron from rust as copper protects itself and you will save for this country enough to pay the national debt in 20 years.

THE Du Pont de Nemours Company, which leads in important chemical research, announces discovery of a new chemical called "noezone" that protects rubber from deterioration through exposure to air.

Rubber loses its elasticity, becoming brittle and worthless because of oxygen's effect upon the rubber.

FIRST the chemists proved that oxygen really does the damage. Now they announce a chemical discovery, an "anti-oxidant"

1 DEAD; QUELL RIOTS

One man was killed, two others shot, and at least five beaten in week-end disturbances at coal mines operated in this section with non-union labor.

M. C. Watkins was slain by a bullet in fusillades exchanged between Negro miners and coal and iron policemen at Moon Run, Robinson township. The battle resulted from the arrest of Willa Wheeler, Negro boarding housekeeper, on a charge of disorderly conduct. The miners attacked the police in an effort to release her and Watkins was standing in front of his home, watching the riot, when a bullet struck him in the abdomen. M. J. Ford and C. C. Alexander, county detectives, were directed by Chief George W. Murren to investigate.

Odie May and Lorenz Hill, Negro non-union miners, were shot from ambush near the Pittsburgh Coal Company's Gallatin mine. State police were called to quell a fight between union and non-union forces that followed. May and Hill were taken to the Monongahela Hospital, where it was said their wounds were not serious.

Five youths accused of disorderly conduct at No. 2 mine of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company near Castle Shannon, complain that coal and iron police beat them. One of the five, Samuel Mullenoski, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. The others, John Benik, Peter Karkhalla, Christ Gilla and Lawrence Reiter, were taken to Central Police Station.

Two Slain, Ohioan Held

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 10. — (AP.)—Andrew Balog, 22, was in jail here today while police investigated the killing last night of his wife, Ethel, 19, and her 19-month-old son, Eddie.

Balog said he came home just in time to see a man strike his wife and jump through a window. The mother died almost instantly and the child was killed when it fell from her arms, police said. Balog was arrested, they said, when they found discrepancies in his story. Neighbors declared the couple had been quarreling.

Officer Wrecks Venture -:- In Adventure As Boy

HELEN MARSHALL

Dissatisfied with the tameness of the life she was leading in her home town, New Martinsville, W. Va., this young woman donned the garb of a boy and came to Pittsburgh in the hope that as a man she might live a fuller existence and enjoy more piquant experiences than are open to her own sex.

PLAYS PART WELL

As the picture shows, she overlooked none of the masculine accoutrements in preparing her masquerade. From cap to shoes Helen is attired in male garments. Her postures and attitudes deceived most of those with whom she came in contact, but not the police.

POLICEMAN ENDS LARK

Helen enjoyed herself while she escaped detection. It was lots of fun, she says, to be a boy. When the police took her in charge she readily admitted the hoax, however, and expressed willingness to be a girl again. They detained her at the police station, where she told of her adventures.

SINCLAIR LOSES OIL LEASE

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The government today regained the rich Teapot Dome naval oil reserve.

In a lengthy decision, the Supreme Court held that the leasing transaction by which Ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall turned over the reserve to Harry F. Sinclair, oil man, was "shot through with fraud." Consequently, the court ordered the lease canceled. The decision was unanimous.

Similar words were used when the court cancelled E. L. Doheny's lease to the Elk Hills, California, reserve. It said that lease was "tainted with corruption."

By these decisions the court ended the government's long legal battle to recapture the oil lands which Fall leased.

Justice Butler, who read the Sinclair decision, said that all circumstances in the lease "pointed to a fraudulent conspiracy." He added, however, that the question of bribery did not enter into the case, although the government charged that Liberty bonds passed from Sinclair to Fall.

Throughout his opinion Justice Butler condemned Fall. He pain[illegible] him as "a faithless public off[illegible]

Divide Series Purse

Twenty-six Pirates, including Manager Bush and Coaches Jewel Ens and Oscar Stanage, were awarded full shares of the loser's purse of the world series at a meeting held in the Pirate clubhouse at noon today. The committee in charge of the division took the remaining two shares and divided them up proportionately among Secretary Sam Watters, Scouts Chic Fraser, Bill Hinchman and Joe Devine, Trainer George Asten, Groundkeeper Jack Fogarty and Socko McGeary, the clubhouse boy.

The Pirates who received full shares were as follows: Victor Aldridge, Mike Cvengros, Joe Dawson, Carmen Hill, Remy Kremer, Lee Meadows, John Miljus and Emil Yde, pitchers; Johnny Gooch, Earl Smith and Roy Spencer, catchers; Joe Cronin, George Grantham, Heinie Groh, Joe Harris, Hay Rhyne, Pie Traynor and Glenn Wright, infielders; Clyde Barnhart, Fred Brickell, Hazen Cuyler, Lloyd Waner and Paul Waner, outfielders; Manager Bush and Coaches Ens and Stanage.

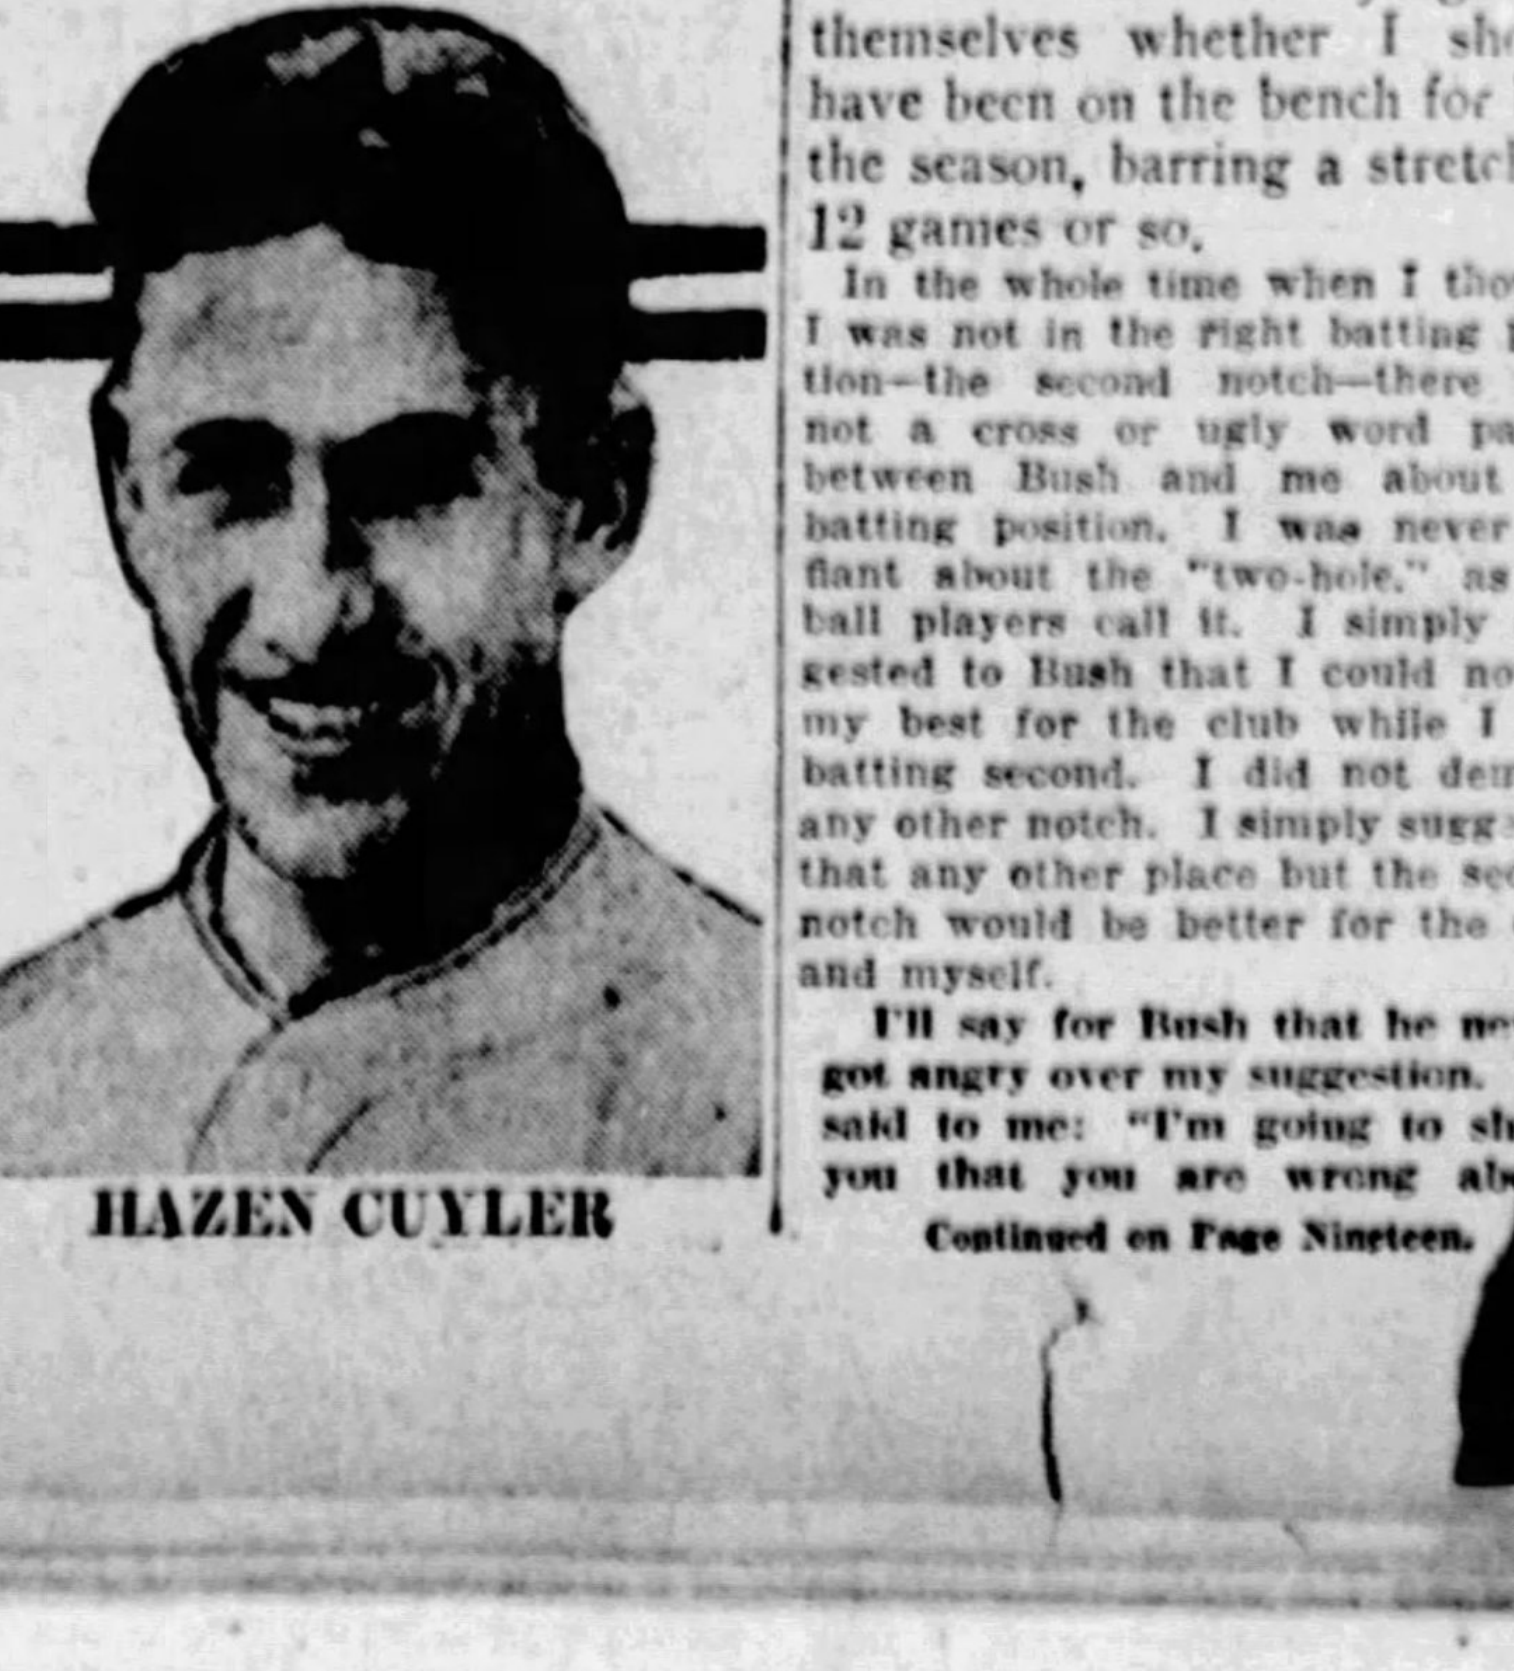
BUSH BLAMED ME FOR HIS ERROR, CUYLER SAYS, BARING RIFT

BY HAZEN CUYLER,
Pirate Outfielder,

Copyright, 1927, by the Sun-Telegraph.

I am writing this story because there have been so many stories about the "Cuyler incident," stories which were not fair to all parties concerned—Mr. Dreyfuss, Mr. Bush and myself. I am telling this story, too, because I believe I owe it to the thousands of fans who were so kind to me in my unpleasantness on the Pirates. This is not my native city, but since it was here that I broke into the big league, and since Pittsburgh is the only city I have represented in the big league, it is at least my native baseball city.

Tells His Story



HAZEN CUYLER

I'll tell where I've been at fault, and I'll tell where my superiors have been at fault, and then the fans can judge for themselves whether I should have been on the bench for half the season, barring a stretch of 12 games or so.

In the whole time when I thought I was not in the right batting position—the second notch—there was not a cross or ugly word passed between Bush and me about my batting position. I was never defiant about the "two-hole," as the ball players call it. I simply suggested to Bush that I could not do my best for the club while I was batting second. I did not demand any other notch. I simply suggested that any other place but the second notch would be better for the club and myself.

I'll say for Bush that he never got angry over my suggestion. He said to me: "I'm going to show you that you are wrong about

Wright in Auto Crash

Police today said they did not get the names of three men who were companions of Glenn Wright, shortstop on the Pittsburgh baseball team, who is scheduled to appear in Traffic Court to answer a charge of reckless driving as a result of a collision between his automobile and a machine driven by Melvin Morgan, 32, of 5637 Hobart street, at Shady avenue, in Darlington road, yesterday. Wright posted $100 for his appearance. Morgan also was charged with reckless driving.

Wright will be given a hearing in Traffic Court tomorrow.

"I LOST GAME," GOOCH

By HAVEY J. BOYLE.

It is a spring evening in Paso Robles, Cal., site of the Pirates' training camp. A red-haired ball player, contemplating the various aspects of baseball, observes to this writer:

"I'll tell you," in a Tennessee drawl, "if a ball player kicks one he ought to be able to stand the gaff when a baseball writer points out his error."

The red-haired ball player's name was John Gooch. This writer, watching the flickering lights of automobile headlights on the King's Highway, speculated meditatively.

The time and the scene now change. It is a fall evening in New York. The place is a hotel in New York City. The Pirates have just lost the final game of the world series—to sink into ignominous defeat.

A red-haired ball player, named Gooch, approaches a baseball writer, named Charles J. Doyle. The red-haired ball player has a firm chin, and resolute eyes, dimmed just a little with a watery glaze over the blue pupils.

JOHNNY SEEKS BLAME

"Larry," he says, using the nickname of Doyle affected by ball players who are intimates of Doyle, a nickname derived from the fact that once there was a romantic figure of the Giants called Larry Doyle, "Larry," repeats he red-haired catcher of the Pirates, "will you do me a favor?"

"Sure, John," says Larry, "what is it I can do?"

"Larry," says John Gooch, "I want to correct a mistaken impression about that last world series game Miljus and the rest of us worked so hard for today. You know, Larry," and here John Gooch tugged at Doyle's coat lapels, "they scored that a wild pitch today—you know, Larry, that ball that Miljus threw to Lazzeri which allowed the winning run to come over. Say, Larry, that wasn't a wild pitch. That was a passed ball by the catcher. Nine times out of ten I would have [illegible] that ball, Larry, but I was down on the ground when that ball went a little wide—and high. That ball should have been caught. I didn't catch it, Larry. Will you put

Report Pirates To Trade Kiki To Reds

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Pittsburgh baseball fans have made their last call for Kiki Cuyler.

Cuyler will be placed on the block this winter. There are just seven clubs in the National League that would be glad to take Cuyler off Pittsburgh's hands at advantageous terms. First and foremost is New York. McGraw would trade on liberal terms for Cuyler, but, because of the age-old feud between McGraw and Barney Dreyfuss, Cuyler is out so far as the Giants are concerned.

Right now the chatterboxes have it that Kiki will go to Cincinnati in exchange for George Kelly and Hughie Critz, or for Critz alone if the other deal cannot be swung. If the Pirates get Critz they will shift Grantham to first base.

Wilbert Robinson, president and manager of the Dodgers, is willing to give Jess Petty to Pittsburgh for Cuyler and Rhyne.

REBELS MASS FOR ATTACK ON BORDER TOWN

MOBILIZE FORCES IN U. S.

By International News Service.

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico, Oct. 10.—This important rail center on the Rio Grande River today became the new vortex in the military activities of the present political revolution in Mexico.

Three separate columns of rebel troops, reported to have been recruited on the American side, are planning to attack this city within the next 36 hours, according to word received by the Mexican consul at Laredo, Tex.

SHIFT COMMAND

Support to the reports of the impending attack came late last night when it was learned that Gen. Enrique Torres, staunch Calles supporter and one of the most prominent generals in the Mexican army, took over command of the federal garrison here. He replaces Gen. Gonzales, considered an anti-Calles sympathizer.

This city, with Juarez, is one of the most strategic border cities and frequently changed hands in revolutions of the past. In possession of Nuevo Laredo, the revolutionists would be in control of the most important point of entry from the United States, thus cutting off needed supplies for the interior.

Gen. Gonzales, the former commander of the garrison, attended a meeting of the revolutionary junta held at Laredo, Tex., last night.

It is reported that he will lead one of the columns against Nuevo Laredo. Truck loads of arms and munitions were reported to have been sent to the border from San Antonio.

MEMBERSHIP IN SYMPHONY LIMITED

"Only 275 more associate members can be accepted by the Pittsburgh Symphony Society," officials of the society declared at headquarters, 423 Bakewell Building, as the drive for memberships entered its last week.

Associate memberships are classified as follows: Class A, dues $15; Class B, dues $10, and Class C, dues $3. Each member will be allotted two seats free to each of the three concerts to be given by the society this season.

Sixty-four of the 100 contributing members have already been enrolled with every indication that the required amount will be reached before the close of the drive.

The success of the society will thus be assured with the enrollment of the 275 associate and 36 contributing members. This will mean that for the first time in 20 years—since the days of the leadership of Archer, Victor Herbert and Emil Paur—that Pittsburgh will be represented by its own symphony orchestra.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE WINNING

Officers and employes of industries and stores in the Pittsburgh district are reported at Salvation Army headquarters to be making a generous response to the Army's appeal for contributions to its $105,500 budget fund. It is said that not since the war have contributions been so generous.

The campaign is now entering upon its last week and this morning, while all returns were not in from over the week-end, it was estimated that the fund would begin the week at about $36,000.

VICE CRUSADER HELD FUGITIVE

J. E. Cummings, 25, former dry agent and bodyguard of William L. King, director of the Citizens' League, was turned over to Wheeling (W. Va.) authorities by Magistrate George H. England in Central Police Court today on a warrant charging Cummings with being a fugitive from justice. Detectives said Cummings was wanted in Wheeling for alleged shortage of $142 in his account as salesman of an automobile company.

M'GOVERN AND SHIELDS OPEN HEADQUARTERS

Headquarters of the Independent party, supporting C. C. McGovern and George B. Shields for County Commissioners, were opened this morning at 728 Fourth avenue. The first noon meeting will be held there tomorrow. Nominating petitions, which must be filed tomorrow, are available at the headquarters.

Jury Finds Bobbed Hair Losing Appeal

Bobbed hair among married women apparently is on the wane.

This was forcibly indicated today in Common Pleas Court when more than half of the 100 housewives who answered their names for jury service appeared with long tresses.

Incidentally their clothing ran almost exclusively to black, tan, green and rose materials.

ROSS TOWNSHIP SEEKS CITY ANNEXATION

A petition asking annexation of a portion of Ross township to Pittsburgh, signed by more than three-fifths of the taxpayers of that section of the township adjoining the Twenty-sixth ward, was received by Council when it met today. The meeting was held this morning instead of afternoon, according to an arrangement made last week when the members were planning to attend the sixth world series game here.

The legislation providing for the extension of the Boulevard of the Allies was passed finally. Other ordinances approved were those creating the position of a secretary of the new Department of City Development at $3,500 annually and prohibiting parking on Carson street between Brownsville avenue and South Seventh street and between South Seventh street and Arlington avenue from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Among the ordinances presented was one accepting a 16-foot strip on the south side of Fifth avenue between Atwood street and Oakland avenue. The deed, which will enable the city to widen the street at that point, has been executed by the Union Trust Company.

Councilman Little presented an ordinance appropriating $30,000 for engineering expenses for the erection of the East street bridge to connect Charles and Essen streets. Councilman Winters presented a bill fixing the pay of steamfitters in the employ of the city at $12.50 a day, the union rate.

Henry Fox, 153 Plymouth street, requested that the city level and remove debris from the site of the old No. 20 engine house, Duquesne Heights, and turn the deed over to the Board of Education to be used as part of the Snodgrass School property.

that will make all rubber, from tires to toy balloons and overshoes last longer. A slight addition to the rubber of a "negative catalyst substance" gives results that will save millions. In the last 27 years men have learned more about chemistry than they had learned before, in all their hundreds of thousands of years on earth. There is no limit to knowledge, it is only beginning.

IN Germany, sentiment against capital punishment is strong. One hundred legal specialists sign a petition asking the Reichstag to legislate against "the futile cruelty" of taking human life. Murderers in Germany are beheaded, in the old style, by hand, not by machine, as in France.

IF the headsman, with axe or sword disgusts intelligent Germans, how much more should Americans be ashamed of their electric chair with science doing the hangman's work.

A nation intelligent enough to harness lightning should be too decent to use it killing miserable, often mentally irresponsible human beings.

MEXICAN government airplanes are bombing scattered bands of revolutionists, as you read this, and Calles and Obregon announce that the "revolt" is crushed.

When Mr. Taft was running for a second term, and doubt of his election was expressed, a well educated Mexican asked "Is not President Taft head of your Army and Navy and if so what is to prevent his reelection?"

IT is not easy for creatures on the ground to fight against others in the air. Rabbits attacked by hawks made that discovery long ago. Rebels fighting Spain and France made the discovery recently in Morroco. The American government will make the discovery some day. Then it will take aviation seriously, stop building battleships that would have to hide from flyers in war.

CHAINS WIFE IN HOME

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 10.—John Stahon of R. D. 1, Wesleyville, was being sought by police here today for an alleged attack upon his wife after he had tied her hands and chained her in their home. The woman is in a serious condition in St. Vincent's Hospital, where she was taken after being picked up by a motorist as she was making her way blindly along the highway near her home, having freed herself of her bonds. Her husband, said to have been intoxicated, fled.

Three sons and a daughter of the woman, living in Erie, are said to have refused the woman shelter.

BERLIN IS HOST TO SYNOD

SOMERSET, Pa., Oct. 10.—The fifty-eighth annual session of the Pittsburgh Synod of the Reformed Church is meeting at Trinity Reformed Church, Berlin, with more than 100 ministers in attendance. Reports of the educational institutions sponsored by the Synod showed exceptional progress this year. These institutions are the Reformed Theological Seminary, Franklin and Marshall College, Hood College of Frederick, Md., and Catawba College and Academies. In connection with the meeting the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Trinity Church, the oldest Reformed congregation west of the Alleghenies, is being celebrated. The Rev. D. S. Stephan is pastor.

SEEK TO ENJOIN FIGHT AGAINST EVICTION

An injunction decree directed against the United Mine Workers of America, to restrain them from further efforts to retain houses of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation for striking union miners, was presented in Federal Court today by counsel for the corporation.

It was received by Judges W. H. S. Thomson, R. M. Gibson and F. P. Schoonmaker, who took it under advisement until later in the day. Counsel for the defendants were present in court and were ordered to read the decree and offer their arguments this afternoon.

The decree is based on the opinion handed down recently by Judge Schoonmaker on the general injunction and damage petition filed by the corporation. It becomes effective when signed by the court.

TRAIN HITS CAR, THREE KILLED

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 10—(AP.)—Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Ferguson and Mildred Clark, all of this city, were killed yesterday afternoon when their car was struck by a train at a crossing at Washington Bottom, eight miles south of here.

Injured in the accident were Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Bjornson of this city and Mrs. W. Merritt Taggart of this city and Orlando, Fla. They were not seriously injured, however, and will recover.

Bjornson said they could not see the train approaching, trees obstructing their vision.

KERR SPEAKS AT LAYING OF TEMPLE CORNERSTONE

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Oct. 10.—The Rev. Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr, pastor Shady Side Presbyterian Church, was the principal speaker at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Masonic Temple at noon today. District Deputy J. Russel Urmison, New Castle, placed the stone. A parade of visiting Masons led by the high school band and short addresses featured the event.

CUYLER TELLS AGONY OF SEEING BUCS LOSE

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

"I never want to go through the agony of sitting on the bench and seeing the Bucs lose like that again. I almost turned gray."

Ki Cuyler mopped his brow and his voice was husky when he said that at the end of the world series in New York. Then he shook his head:

"I didn't think it possible that things could break like that for us. If someone had told me we'd lose four straight to the Yanks I'd have told them they were crazy."

Ki's blue-gray eyes snapped, and his jaw squared:

"All the time I sat there hoping against hope that Bush would call me from the bench. Honest, I sort of expected a chance."

Ki went on with a hopeless gesture. "No one can imagine what I went through. Of course, I might have been a flop but at least I'd have had a try." "Don't misunderstand and think I'm criticising the boss," Ki spoke up quickly. "He knows what he wants to do and what he thinks best. But that doesn't relieve my feelings any. I wanted to help fight for the pennant."

He mopped his brow again:

"The club just wasn't hitting. It went into a slump that happens in every outfit. But we have a great club and nobody can deny that. The Yanks, though, were having phenomenal luck. That helped them."

Cuyler swung his arm as if at an imaginary ball. "Wait'll next season. I've learned my lesson. And I'll never make the same mistake again."

He laughed and tossed dull care away with a shrug. "I'm a better man for the experience. I'll be a bear next year."

SINCLAIR LOSES OIL LEASE

He said Fall intended to put through the lease whether it was legal or not.

The decision was a sweeping victory for the government, for the court held that the lease was made without legal authority, and therefore refused to allow claims by Sinclair for money spent in improving the property. Among the claims were $300,000 by the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company for 17 steel tanks and $700,000 by the Sinclair Pipe Line Company for pumping equipment. These companies are owned jointly by the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

source that the players had a dispute as to the method of the divisions of the money.

Adam Comorosky, the Polish boy who played some games as the team went down the pennant stretch, was not given any remuneration for his efforts. However, the recruit was not in many games.

The members of the Pittsburgh Club doubtless will receive much comfort in their prize money as each player will get approximately $3,994. Sam Watters draws down $1,997. Each of the three scouts is richer by $1,331; Trainer Asten gets a pot totaling $998, while Fogarty and Socko will be happy with $499 as a gift from the players.

VARE-WILSON BALLOTS LOST IN MERCER COUNTY

MERCER, Pa., Oct. 10.—Several ballot boxes in Farrell containing the Vare-Wilson vote cast last November are missing, commissioners of Mercer county announced today. It is believed the boxes, ordered impounded by the Federal Court at Pittsburgh, may have been used at the primaries September 20 in violation of orders sent out by the commissioners. A search is being conducted.

VOTE FRAUD ARRESTS TO TOTAL 150

Investigation of alleged irregularities in Allegheny county's primary election continued today, with promise of additional criminal informations and arrests, although the returning board has virtually finished its work.

A new stimulus to the probe was expected from the return here of officials of the Pennsylvania Elections Association, absent for nearly a week on court cases in the East, and there were indications that the number of those arrested in the roundup might reach 150 during the week. At present 133 persons have been arrested, 125 through the efforts of the Pennsylvania and Allegheny County Elections Association. The others were named in informations sworn to by private citizens.

It was admitted today that petitions asking that additional ballot boxes be brought in would be presented to court today and tomorrow and it was known that evidence not yet acted upon is in the hands of District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner. He already has ordered informations against the Fourteenth District, Twenty-first Ward; the Ninth District, Twelfth Ward, and the Twenty-fifth District, Tenth Ward, and these are expected to be filled out today.

Meanwhile talk of grand jury action in the probe continues to grow, and it is considered possible that such steps may be taken, if only to bring out evidence of alleged padding of registration lists.

PITTSBURGH BOY IS DROWNED

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Robert Kuhman, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Kuhman, 1506 Davis avenue, Pittsburgh, was drowned in Slippery Rock Creek last night. The body was recovered.

The child, with his parents and a brother, a year older, was enjoying an outing near McConnells Mills. The two boys slipped from a rock into the creek. J. P. Martin, of Oakmont, leaped into the stream and succeeded in rescuing the older brother, but Robert went down.

By Universal Service.

FLINT, Mich., Oct 10.—When his airplane, 100 feet from the ground, took a nose dive here William (Scottie) Clunie, pilot, and two passengers were cremated. The gas tank exploded.

The passengers were Joseph Holter, an employe of the aviation field. and Carl Ebert, a student flier.

Soon after the take-off the plane veered into the wind as the aviator banked for a turn. The motor stopped and the machine crashed to the ground and was immediately enveloped in flames.

Clunie was regarded as a veteran pilot with five years' experience. The tragedy was witnessed by several hundred persons.

Congress Must Pass Jones' Bill to Assure Us a Merchant Marine

Congress is falling down on its pledge to the people, contained in the Merchant Marine Act of 1920, which declared "our purpose at all events to have a Merchant Marine adequate for commerce and as a naval auxiliary."

What is "adequate"? Well, we have a country whose national wealth is supposed to be four hundred million dollars, incomparably the richest in the world. We have an export trade of forty-eight hundred million dollars a year, which is eight hundred million more than our nearest rival, England.

Yet of the total volume of American foreign commerce, export and import, American vessels today carry less than 30 per cent. The balance is carried in foreign-flag ships.

The situation is geting worse. Sinec 1921, for every single ship of two thousand gross tons and over that has been built in the United States, Great Britain has built 45, Germany 12, France five, Italy four and Japan four.

Both for ocean carrying and naval auxiliary purposes, our merchant fleet is perilously inadequate.

For nine years since the war we have waited for private interests to build up our Merchant Marine. They have failed. The job is now up to the Federal Government and the Shipping Board. The country will stand behind the bill Senator Jones will introduce in Congress. It will provide for the creation of a balanced Merchant Marine by action of the United States Government.

The Jones' bill reaffirms the purpose of the Merchant Marine Act of 1920. It authorizes the Shipping Board to recondition and improve merchant vessels now owned by the United States, so that they will be adequate in competition with the foreign carrying trade. The board is also authorized and directed to present to Congress, from time to time, recommendations for building the new vessels required.

It is not a question whether we want private operation or Government operation. It is simply a question whether we want an American marine at all. Everyone who does will back the Jones' bill, which means that it will become a law.

BOY DIES AFTER PRANKS ON WAY TO CHURCH

A friendly scuffle yesterday resulted in the death of George Vaux, Jr., 13, son of Dr. C. H. Vaux, 5200 Liberty avenue.

A chum of the Vaux boy, William B. Cullen, 15, of 348 Melwood street, was arrested and is being held for investigation at the Forty-third street station house.

Sunday morning, the two youths, the best of friends, were en route to church and were playfully knocking each others hats from their heads. At the close of the church service, the Vaux boy complained of pains in his head and returned to his home, where he became ill. He was rushed to the West Penn Hospital, where he died a few hours later. An autopsy revealed that his death was due to a hemorrhage of the brain, caused, according to physicians, by a blow on the head.

The mother of the Vaux boy is dead and his father, Dr. Vaux, has been confined to his bed since last April with heart trouble.

FRENCH FLIERS ON FIRST LEG OF ARGENTINE HOP

PARIS, Oct. 10.—(INS.)—Dieudonne Costes and Lieut. Le Brix, the two French aviators who had intended to fly to New York, took off from Le Bourget Field at 9:49 a. m. today for St. Louis, Senegal, on the first leg of their flight to Buenos Aires, Argentina.

The takeoff of their plane, the "Nungesser-Coli," was perfect.

Before taking off, Costes tried out his motor for three minutes.

Then he shot down the field and headed south towards Africa.

The hop to St. Louis is 4,300 kilometers. After remaining there overnight the aviators expect to take off across the South Atlantic to Pernambuco, Brazil, a distance of 3,200 kilometers. A third hop of 2,000 kilometers will bring them to Rio de Janeiro, and then they will fly the remaining 1,870 kilometers to Buenos Aires.

The two aviators arrived on the field at 6 o'clock and immediately begun superintending the loading of their plane, which was stocked with 2,800 litres of gasoline and 240 litres of oil. The plane is also carrying 1,200 pounds of merchandise, including perfumes, lace, letters and Paris morning papers.

NAB 576 GALS. LIQUOR IN ROSS TOWNSHIP

'Step right this way, gentlemen" prohibition officers say was the greeting they received as they opened the door of the Daniels' Farm road house, Ross township yesterday.

The officers followed directions and seized 99 gallons of whisky, 457 gallons of wine, 20 gallons of alcohol, two slot machines and much "cutting" plant equipment.

George Daniels, proprietor of the Five Mile House, West View, was arrested as proprietor along with Frank Ross and Gustave Landau, attendants. They were released on their own recognizances when they promised to appear before the United States Commission and post bonds for hearings on liquor law violation charges. Constable A. V. Nye of the office of the Justice of the Peace George B. Shields' office took charge of the slot machines.

KIN BLAMES JEALOUSY

Pittsburgh relatives of Theodore Clinton Schroedel, high school student, fatally shot at Conneaut Lake Saturday by Joseph E. Peterman, who then killed himself, today were able to throw little light on the tragedy. Their only supposition was that Peterman had become crazed with jealousy because of attentions Schroedel paid the slayer's 15-year-old stepdaughter, Lorraine Mellon.

The boy formerly lived in Pittsburgh with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Schroedel, who took him to live on a farm in Crawford county last year to improve his health. Members of the family remaining in Pittsburgh are Mrs. Homer Mench, 1613 Morningside avenue, a sister of the slain boy; Dale Schroedel, an employe of the A. M. Byers Company, and Philip Schroedel, Jr., an employe of the Peoples Natural Gas Company, brothers.

LUNGS FAIL, STUDENTS PUMP LIFE IN BOY

By Universal Service.

PALACIOS, Tex., Oct. 10.—Death isonly a few hours away for Carl Berry, 16-year-old Palacios High School football player, whose lungs became paralyzed Saturday morning.

Surgeons who have directed Carl's teammates in administering artificial respiration for the last 45 hours, have given up all hope.

Yet, as his teammates continued to force air into his lungs, Carl joked and laughed with them during his short periods of consciousness, unaware that death rides on each motion.

Carl was injured in a football game. The injury was considered of little consequence until yesterday morning, when his lungs stopped functioning.

The family physician immediately resorted to artificial respiration and called Houston for a pulmotor.

An airplane picked up the apparatus and flew off into a horizon black with brooding clouds.

Meanwhile, at Palacios, Berry's teammates, working in shifts, continued to pump the vital air into his lungs, working his arms up and down, up and down.

Anxious eyes scanned the skies for the black speck that meant the life-giving machine was close at hand.

An hour went by, and another was flitting into the pages of time when word came that the airplane had been forced down several miles distant by the storm.

The pilot and the pulmotor operator were uninjured. They commandeered a passing automobile and the race against death went on.

The spark of life flickered low, almost went out, as one of the "pumpers" missed a stroke.

Rain began to fall and fears were felt for the safety of the automobile as it takes only a little rain to make roads impassable in this section of the gulf coast country.

The pulmotor arrived and was applied immediately, but failed to work as effectively as was anticipated.

So Carl's tired teammates went back to their task of—up, down, up, down.

Through the night they worked his arms up and down, keeping the spark of life alive.

With dawn, Carl slipped into unconsciousness. The even motions were kept up and at 10 o'clock the youth opened his eyes, smiled at his sleepy-eyed "pumpers" and joked with them.

Sunday night surgeons gave up all hope. It is only a matter of hours, they said.

Yet, while there is a spark of life in the body of their teammate, the rhythmic "up, down, up, down," will continue.

FLIER KILLED BY TOY BALLOONS

BOONVILLE, Cal., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—A flock of toy balloons was blamed today for an airplane crash here costing the life of Miss Thelma Farrer, 17, of Boonville, and seriously injuring the pilot and a youth, also a passenger.

C. D. Warren of San Francisco, the pilot, declared his engine had been fouled by the balloons 250 feet in the air, causing the plane to fall.

Ralph Witherell, 21, of Ukiah, was the second passenger. He suffered injuries which probably will prove fatal. Warren was not fatally hurt.

BILLS CITY OVER POLICE SHOTS

Bad marksmanship on the part of police may cost the city $7.75. Mrs. Mary Moran, 1014 Sarah street, sent a bill for that amount to Council today, saying it was for damages caused when bullets fired by three patrolmen at two fleeing suspects struck the drainpipes on her house.

DEATH WINS RACE WITH SNAKE-BITE SERUM

By Universal Service.

VERNON, B. C., Oct. 9.—Although a Canadian Pacific Railway express train was held an hour at Mission, a ferry at Kelowna kept at the wharf, and customs and immigraation gates flung wide to insure no delay in getting snake-bite serum from Spokane or Seattle, Robert Whittle, 11- year-old Vancouver schoolboy, is dead here of bites from a rattlesnake.

The lad, who hit the snake with a stick on a bluff near Coldstream, was bitten several times by the rattler. Doctors treated him as well as they could, but he lapsed into unconsciousness.

Feverish efforts were made by wire to get the serum that might arrest the rush of poison to the boy's heart. Thirty thousand units of anti-venin left Spokane by motor when it was found unavailable at Seattle, but death won the race.

The Plays Stage and Screen And Players

Switch in Featured Heroes Takes Clive Brook to Cast Of "French Dressing" Film

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 10.

A SASHAY of featured heroes takes Clive Brook from the Famous Players lot to Bob Kane's film, "French Dressing," with Ben Lyon in all likelihood going from Kane to Famous to stay leading man for Esther Ralston in "The Glory Girl."

It has been quite a time since Clive enacted on the home lot. Famous loaned him to Sam Goldwyn for Gilda Gray's picture, "The Devil Dancer," and now he goes to the First National Studio for "French Dressing."

The Kane unit is looking around for a leading woman for its initial West coast picture. Esther Ralston and her husband, George Webb, are back home from a vacation that took them to Salt Lake City. Jack Dempsey hails from that vicinity. His folks still live there, in a lovely home Jack gave them.

By the bye, Jack and Estelle Taylor Dempsey are being awaited in Hollywood eagerly by their many friends. Many consider Jack won the heavyweight championship of the world in the Chicago melee. Indeed, so strong is this opinion, that most who bet Gene Tunney would defeat Dempsey have refused to accept money from those who bet on Jack.

Speaking of Estelle, we hear that she is to play in Bob Kane's second First National offering, "Duke of Ladies," featuring Ben Lyon.

Robert Vignola, the director who megaphoned Gilda Gray in "Cabaret," starts around the world in a week or two. This will be Bob's second journey over the circuit.

Johnny Walters has finished "The Side Show," or "Two Flaming Youths," as it is now called, with Chester Conklin and W. C. Fields, and is now Manhattan bound for a well-earned vacation. Upon his return he directs Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in "Under the Tonto Rim."

Maurice Stiller is another director en route to Manhattan and thence to his native Sweden for a vacation. Greta Garbo—who hasn't yet decided whether she's engaged to Mr. Stiller or her "art"—is working in the "Divine Woman." John Mack Brown, who made his debut in pictures so successfully as Marion Davies' hero in "The Fair Co-Ed," has been added to the Garbo cast, joining Lars Hanson and Lowell Sherman.

Happy Ending Not Asset to Films Anymore

"The reign of the happy ending and the clinch fadeout, without which no motion picture in the past has been considered complete, is about to be disturbed," says Jesse L. Lasky, vice president of Paramount-Famous-Lasky.

"A new contender for the throne of popularity has appeared. The public, having tasted the unhappy ending for a change, finds them highly palatable, and a new path thereby is opened for the artistry of producers."

In proof of his contention, Mr. Lasky pointed to the record kept on a huge signboard in the Paramount studio grounds, the "honor roll," on which every month the 10 current releases of the company scoring greatest box office successes are shown with their records. This roll is exclusive of the road shows, such as "Wings" and "Old Ironsides," which receive special classification.

Leading the "honor roll" as the outstanding sensation of the year is "Underworld," the picture of gangster life in a great city, which ends in a fadeout of high drama. In third place is Emil Jannings' picture, "The Way of All Flesh," which closes with a sob and a tear. A little farther down the list is "Children of Divorce," with Clara Bowe and Esther Ralston, which has its final sequence in gripping tragedy.

SHOWS LINDY AROUND

HOSTESS TO TRANSATLANTIC FLIER
Marion Davies, motion picture star, entertained Col. Charles A. Lindbergh at her bungalow home in Beverly Hills. Later she showed him her studio where she is filming in "The Fair Co-ed."

Valuable Perfume Is Atmosphere In Movie

Smart shops where a woman may spend the last cent of a man's money are laid out with the most studious fidelity and realism in the Hollywood studios. Since woman constitutes the majority of movie audiences, no chances are taken on their sharp eyes detecting an inaccuracy.

Two thousand bottles of imported perfume, borrowed from a Los Angeles merchant, are used in the interior of an exclusive Parisian shop during a scene in Clara Bow's current picture, "Get Your Man." Some of the bottles were valued at $100 each. A special watchman stood guard on the set.

In the Paramount production of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," being made in the same studio, an exact reproduction has been built of Madame Frances' famous shop in New York. Here Lorelei Lee brings Gus Eisman, the Chicago button king, on a shopping expedition and incidently he picks out a dress trimmed with long rows of buttons.

Lindy's Exploit Is Reflected in New Film

Although Col. Charles Lindbergh has refused all offers to appear in motion pictures, his fame is going to be reflected in films just the same. The effect of the young aviator's flight from New York to Paris is apparent in Marion Davies' new starring vehicle, "The Fair Co-ed," a film adaptation of George Ade's musical comedy.

Lindbergh's name and his "Spirit of St. Louis" are shown as the idols of an American college campus and the heroism of his deed will be shown as it affected the millions of college students who were thrilled by the most spectacular air flight the world has ever known. Prominent among the drawings made by the college students in this picture is a charcoal sketch of the famous plane and beneath it the words: "Lindy." It appears upon the blouse of Miss Davies, in the role of the co-ed heroine.

SOCIETY COMEDY IS OFFERED

Michael Arlen and Winchell Smith's new society comedy, "The Zoo," will open in the Nixon this evening. In the cast are Roland Young, Wallace Eddinger, Irene Browne, Lelia Bennett and Lucille Watson.

Tonight in the Alvin will be presented a melodrama from London, "Interference." The cast is headed by Arthur Wontner, A. E. Matthews, Phoebe Foster and Kathlene MacDonell. "Interference" will be here all week with the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

"The Medicine Man," a new play by Elliott Lester, opens the regular theatrical season in the Pitt Monday evening, October 17, playing the usual Pitt matinees, Thursday and Saturday.

Next Monday "Artists and Models" opens an engagement of one week in the Alvin Theater, with the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Florence Moore, Jack Pearl and Jack Osterman head company which goes from here into the Winter Garden, New York. It has already appeared in Philadelphia and Boston.

The musical comedy, "The Coconuts," comes to the Nixon next Monday evening after a season's run in New York, where it was the hit of hits. The production contains the same principal entertainers, headed by the Marx brothers. Irving Berlin wrote the music and lyrics. George S. Kaufman wrote the book.

The stage features in the Penn next week will be seen in a revue called "On the Campus." They include Tommy Christian and his orchestra, Ponce Sisters, recording artists; Cardell Twins, dancers, and others. "The Road to Romance," starring Roman Novarro, will be the screen feature.

Booked for the Grand next week is the Barton Family in syncopating songs and dances. The photoplay will be "The Drop Kick," starring Richard Barthelmess.

The vaudeville bill of five Loew acts to play the Aldine next week has at its head "The Honorable Wu," composed of Chinese girls and boys who will dance the "Black Bottom," imitate stars and otherwise entertain. Reginald Denny's latest comedy feature, "All Aboard," will be seen on the screen.

Jimmie Cooper brings to the Gayety his "Black and White Revue," opening with a midnight show next Sunday. The white portion of the cast has the first half of the program in which to offer their songs, dances and revue numbers and the colored players pick up where they leave off.

Headlining the Keith-Albee vaudeville bill in the Davis next week will be "Old Fiddlers Versus Jazz," entertaining with melodies and fun. On the screen will be comedy, "Figures Don't Lie," starring Esther Ralston.

FEWER PERMITS FOR DANCE HALLS IN ERIE

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 10.—Indian summer weather this fall has caused a decrease in the number of dance hall permit applications here, it is believed. Only 18 have been granted, compared with 33 up to this time in 1926.

BLAST REVEALS N. Y. BOMB FACTORY

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—New York's fourth bombing within four months, which killed five persons and injured 11 others, has left in the ruins of a West Side tenement house evidence of what police called another bomb factory, similar to those reputedly operated by five men now awaiting trial for the attempted wrecking of the Supreme Court building in Brooklyn on September 4.

The entire personnel of the bomb and homicide squads of the police department today was searching for two young men, who authorities believe carried on a systematic manufacture of explosives in a room of a West Thirty-fifth street tenement destroyed in the latest blast Saturday.

A bomb found intact in the ruins of the building, police said, was identical in construction with one found in the Interborough Subway tunnel under the East River previous to the wrecking of two subway stations by bombs last July. The failure of the bomb to explode is believed to have saved the lives of many children in St. Mary's Free Hospital for Children, adjoining the wrecked tenement house in the district of the city known as Hell's Kitchen.

GILLESPIE HEIRS GET 8 MILLION

The heirs of David L. Gillespie, former lumberman, will share in the distribution of $7,905,558.59, according to the first accounting in the estate made Saturday by the Union Trust Company in the office of the register of wills. The total inventory was $11,027,582.42, but a portion went toward claims against the estate. More than $600,000 was paid in state and Federal inheritance taxes.

Pledges to local institutions before Gillespie's death were paid as follows: Y. M. C. A., $10,000; University of Pittsburgh building fund, $25,000; Tuberculosis League, $30,000, and West Penn Hospital, $10,000.

Kaiser's Sister, Aged 61, to Wed Young Student

BONN, Germany, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Cupid's darts have pierced the heart of ex-Kaiser William's 61-year-old sister, the Princess Victoria Zu Schaumberg-Lippe. She has announced her engagement to Dvorjanin Alexander Subkoff, a Russian student at Bonn University, who is 34 years her junior. Sobkoff is said to be a member of an artistocratic Russian family.

Frederica Amelia Wilhelmina Victoria was born at the New Palace near Potsdam, April 12, 1866, and was married to Prince Adolph Zu Schaumberg-Lippe in Berlin when she was 24. The prince died in July, 1916. They had no children.

RUSSELL SCOTT'S BRAIN SOUGHT BY SCIENTISTS

BEATS GALLOWS FOURTH TIME BY SUICIDE

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10—Scientists hope that they will have an opportunity to examine the brain of Russell Scott. The man who faced the gallows three times for murder, only to be reprieved until it could be determined whether he was sane, wrote the final chapter to his life by hanging himself in his cell at the county jail late Saturday night.

Disposition of the body, awaits a prefunctory inquest. It is expected that it will be turned over to Mrs. Scott, the wife who publicly starved herself in a Detroit theater to raise funds to save him.

Mrs. Scott indicated she would take the remains to Detroit for interment. But alienists will insist that they be given an opportunity to study the brain of the man who shone as an actor, then as a financier and finally as a robber and murderer and ended it all with his own hand. Six medical colleges were among the applicants for the body.

Robert Scott, Russell's brother, who aided him in the holdup of the Home Drug Company's store here in 1921, when Joseph Maurer, a clerk was killed, was told of his brother's death at the State penitentiary at Joliet, where he is serving a term for his part in the crime.

LOST $2,000,000

The two brothers entered a career of crime after Russell had lost a personal fortune of $2,000,000 in trying to promote a company to build a bridge over the Detroit river, connecting the United States and Canada. Russell deserted his wife and their three children—the wife who after his arrest for murder came to his defense and has since stood steadfastly by him. The children are in an orphanage at London, Ont.

"Perhaps his dying that way is better for this children—it takes away at least a part of the disgrace from them. Perhaps it proves that he was insane. I always believed he would be free some day. Perhaps this is the only way he could realize freedom."

Mrs. Scott had visited her husband at the jail only six hours before his guards found him hanging from his cell door. He had used his belt for a noose.

"His case was to have come up again this month and I gave up my job as a waitress at the Sherman Hotel a month ago to begin working on his case," Mrs. Scott said. "I wrote letters to people I thought could help financially. I knew he could be saved. While there was life there was hope. Now there is nothing."

NO HINT TO WIFE

According to Mrs. Scott, her husband gave no hint that he intended to end his life when she last visited him. He complained of feeling ill. She said:

"He couldn't talk to me very long because he wanted to get back to his cell and lay down. He said he hoped it wouldn't be long until we had our little home and babies back with us. Then he broken down and cried. He asked me to pray for him."

Scott pleaded guilty to murder in the first degree when he was arraigned for trial the first time and threw himself upon the mercy of the court. But when he found the judge was about to fix his punishment at hanging, he was allowed to change his plea to one of not guilty. He was tried before a jury, found guilty and sentenced to hang. Five hours before his execution a sanity trial was granted. He was taken to Chester prison for the insane and a few months ago was brought to Chicago to undergo another sanity trial, the law providing that when a convict has been found insane after a crime he shall pay the penalty of his crime if reason returns.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

INGROWN NAIL

Turns Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

Here's "Gets-It"

World's Fastest Corn Ender

New Scientific Way

"GETS-IT" is a scientific liquid that millions use, among them famous dancers, athletes, doctors and folks who walk a lot. It ends corns and calluses. One drop stops pain in 3 short seconds. Then the corn loosens and comes off . . . all gone, forgotten. You walk in peace. There are imitations of "Gets-It." So watch out. Get the genuine at all leading druggists. Enough to kill a dozen corns costs only 35c.

YOUR PITTSBURGH

How Well Do You Know It?

THE Peoples Natural Gas Company provides Natural Gas Service to more than 100,000 consumers throughout Southwestern Pennsylvania. In order to do this, it must bring gas from points as far as 300 miles south of Pittsburgh. On the north it reaches up into Clarion county, Pennsylvania, for part of its supply. The pipe lines that transport this gas supply and distribute it to the users total about 3,000 miles in length. A force of upward of 1,500 employes is required to keep the system functioning.

At Brave, Pa., this Company operates the world's largest natural gas compressing station. It also maintains the world's first. This is located at Murraysville, on the William Penn Highway, about 15 miles east from the Pittsburgh city line.

This is one of a Series devoted to some one particular Greater Pittsburgh institution contributing to the growth of this great district.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

THOSE whom the gods wish to decoy, they first make private secretaries.

Marrying your private secretary is getting to be a popular American custom.

There is no relation between a man and a woman, which is so dangerous, or so likely to lead to love and marriage as that of employer and secretary.

Playing together a few hours every evening does not bring you half so much en rapport as working together all day. There is nothing like a lot of mutual interests to put two people on the same wire.

HELEN ROWLAND

In these days a man comes to depend on his private secretary more than he does on his wife. From sharing his secrets and keeping his papers in order, she gradually comes to selecting his clothes and choosing his Christmas presents for him. From protecting him from intruders and remembering his social obligations, she soon gets to mothering him and thinking of him.

From being a luxury, she soon becomes a necessity and a positive addiction. From being merely a part of the office ensemble, she soon becomes his leading lady, stage director, scene-shifter and property man—to say nothing of prompter, alibi, solace and censor.

But, alas, when a man marries his secretary, takes her out of the office and places her in the HOME, so often all the glamour departs, and each of them begins to wonder who this total stranger is!

She is no longer the ministering angel, who saved him from importunate telephone calls from pestiferous women. She is the woman who does the importunate telephoning!

She is no longer the shock-absorber between him and all the office pests and interruptions. She is one of the interruptions!

She is no longer his alibi and his shield, but his mentor and his questionnaire.

The change of frame and setting makes the picture look altogether different!

Catering to a man's palate and stomach and picking up his clothes is not half so thrilling as sharing his troubles and enthusiasms and inspiring him with new ideas.

Turning a private secretary into a wife is turning an asset into a liability, a helpmate into a checkmate and a solace into a responsibility.

If you want to marry a man, first get a job as his private secretary. It's the easiest way. But WHY marry him, and spoil the romance?

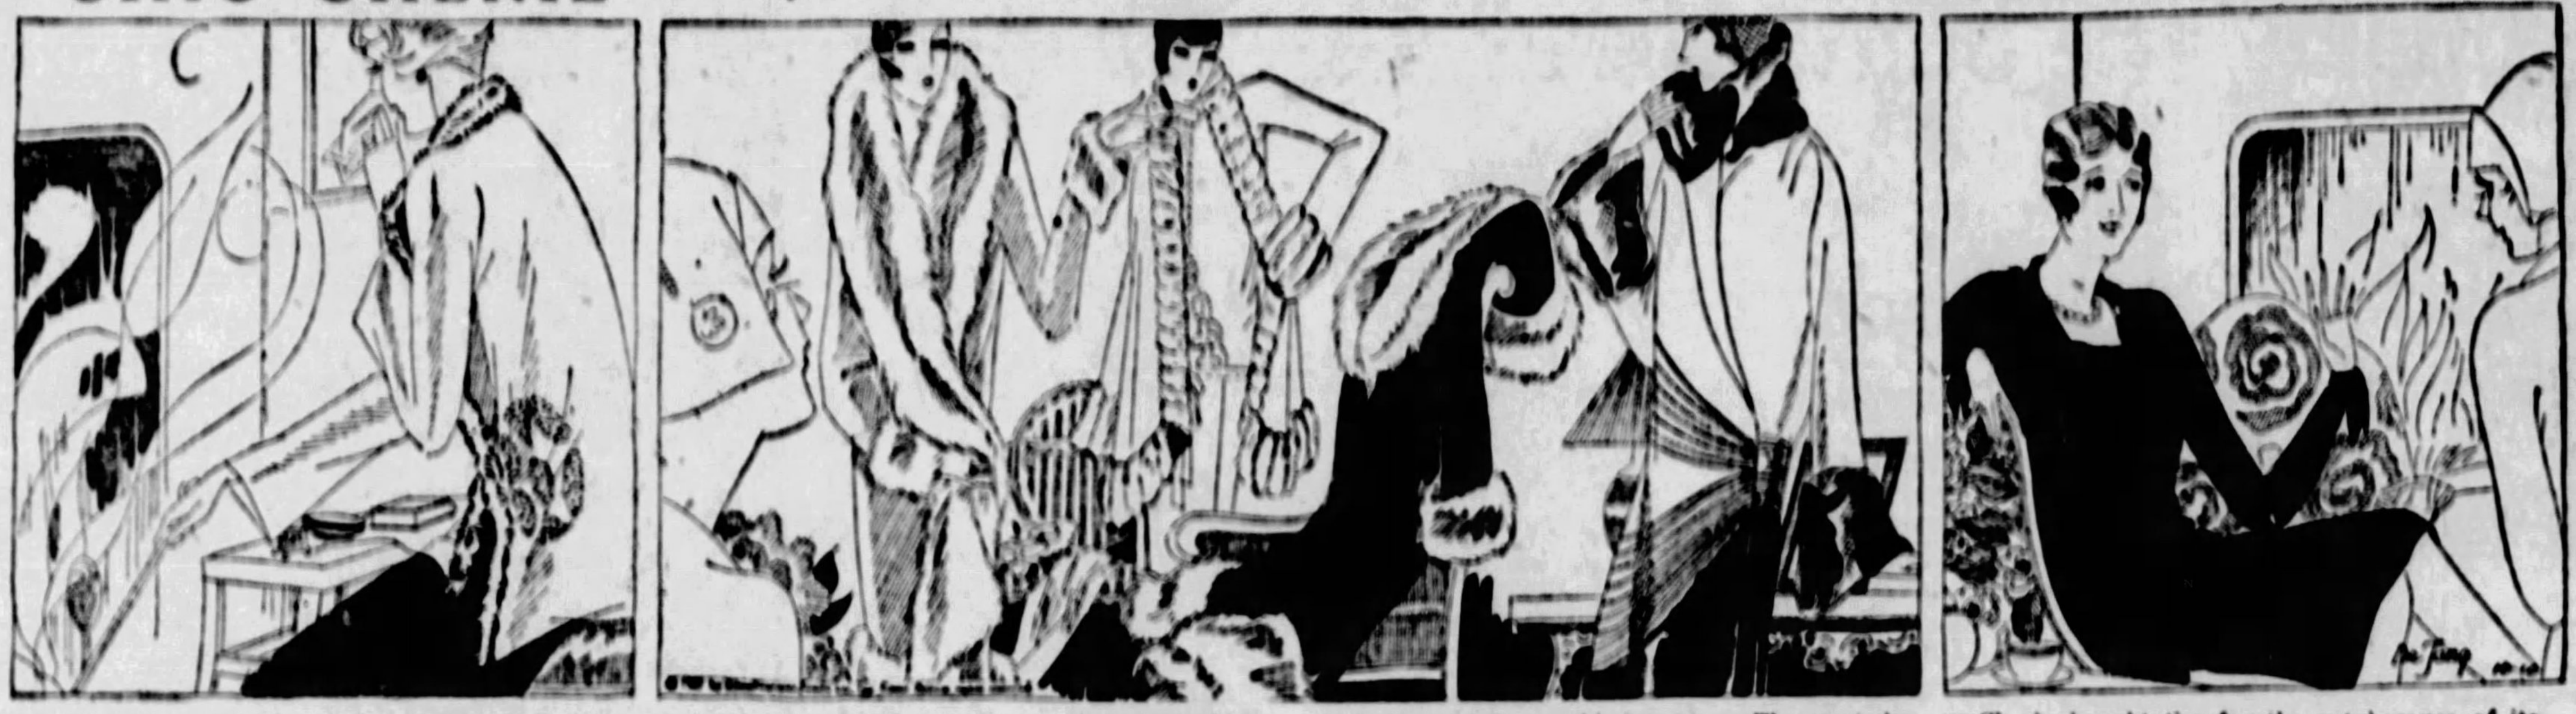
CHIC CHERIE ⁂ Every Coat Has a Silver Lining, Too. ⁂ LATEST FASHIONS



When it's a chilly Autumn day and the fireplace won't burn, there's nothing much for even a heroine to but sniffle. And if she does it in a pair of lounging pajamas with trousers of black satin and a fur-trimmed, embroidered jacket of cherry red satin it may look better but it feels the same!

There is something so snug and warm looking about the new Winter coats. The one to the left, which is made of lots of fox fur with a little cloth, fairly invites blizzards. It's lined with a brocade that has a pattern of metallic threads. The ensemble shows what is happening to the three-piece costume this season. The coat is three-quarter length, flaring from the shoulders. Both dress and coat are of velours. The squirrel trimming is applied in an unusual fashion. Over the chair hangs a velvet coat—this is also lavishly trimmed with fur and lined with brocade. The fourth coat, well—

Cherie bought the fourth coat because of its diagonal tucks—that's reason enough. Soothed and strengthened by her expedition, Cherie returns home to do battle again with the fireplace—only to find that Cousin Emily has conquered the enemy and is offering her tea—another silver lining for a gray day!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

Milk the Big Factor in the Child's Health

TO ME the saddest of all our social problems is the fact that thousands of children are undernourished. They are really half-starved. The poor little things, skinny and hollow chested, with black rings around their eyes, make mute appeal to our sympathies.

DR. COPELAND

The sad thing about it is that poverty is not responsible for this state of affairs. It is something worse than poverty.

Can anything be worse than poverty?

The hardest and most calamitous and painful of all evils is the dense darkness of ignorance. Ignorance is always beyond poverty as a factor in the production of human suffering.

The undernourishment of children is rarely the result of poverty. Much more frequently it is the result of ignorance. Consequently, it is found in the homes of the rich quite as commonly as in the homes of the poor.

The riches of a poor home are the children thereof. The parents have no stocks and bonds to worry over, no pressing social engagements to keep, no "fitting" marriages to arrange, no business "deals" to make. They have time to consider their children and to study their welfare.

The death rate among infants in the lower East Side of New York is less than it is on Fifth avenue. This is true because being a wife and mother is the sole job of the woman in the poor section.

It requires the exclusive attention of the mother to guarantee the health and growth of her child. The mother's job is the hardest and most exacting job in all the world. At the same time it is the most satisfactory job.

In a survey of the homes where undernourishment was most common, it was found that the lack of milk had much to do with the condition. Less than a cup a day was given the growing child.

When a mother learns that in infancy and early childhood milk is almost as essential as air and water, she will see that the milk is provided, no matter what its cost. It must not be regarded as a beverage, but as a food without which the child will not thrive.

I talked with some friends of mine the other day. They are the parents of two fine lads, each about 12 years of age. Already these boys top their parents by a head.

I commented upon it and said, "You know how to feed your children better than your parents fed theirs." "Yes," said the mother, "we had candy and cake and pie and all the rest of things and had little milk."

Children won't grow and thrive without milk. It is good for adults, too. It seems a pity we do not make milk the national drink. Why not?

Nothing could be better for any nation than to put on every table at every meal a great big pitcher of high-grade milk. Let's try to establish that health-promoting standard.

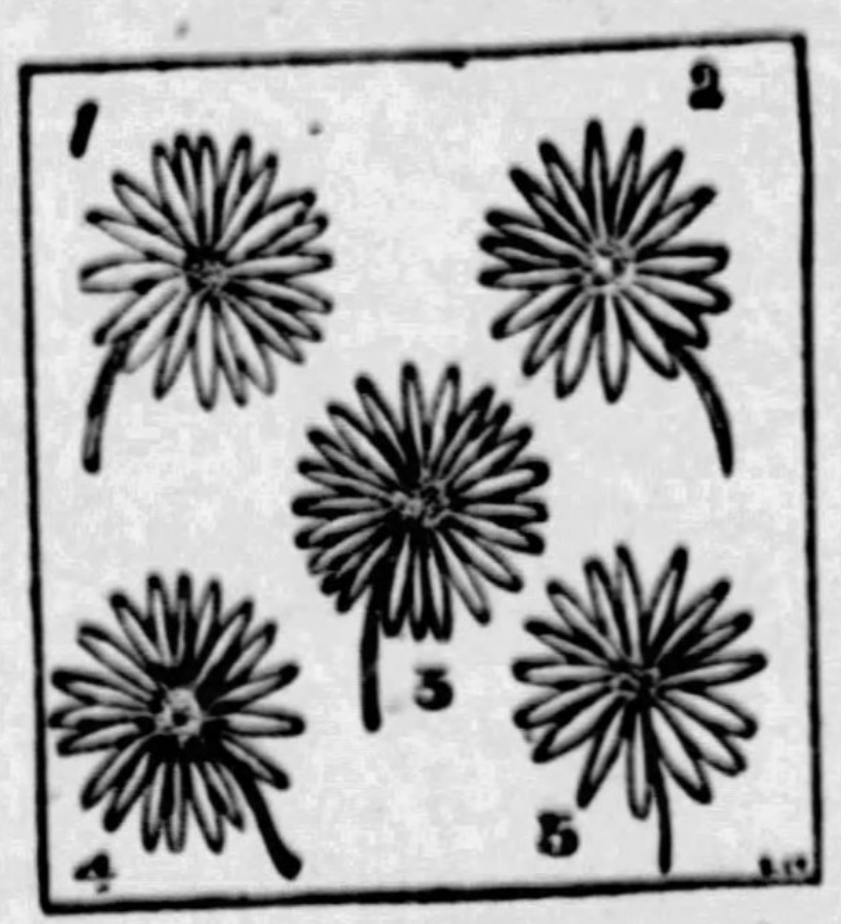
TEASERS



Daisies

Which daisy has the most petals?

Look at all five of them, and try to estimate the one which is the most prolific—as far as petals are concerned.

Do not try to count the petals on each one—just estimate the daisy that seems to have the greatest number.

Saturday's Teaser

The rovers were: 1, Potomac; 2, Susquehanna; 3, Delaware; 4, Hudson; 5, Connecticut. To name all five correctly is exceptional; 4, very good; 3, good; 2, average; 1, fair; 0, poor.

(Copyright by Public Ledger)

What's the Answer?

1. Who was Calpurnia?
2. About how many languages are there in the world?
3. What kinds of ants have wings?
4. What is the largest fresh water lake in the world?
5. Are rattlesnakes hatched from eggs?
6. Does the United States own any Panama Canal territory?
7. How is cotton mercerized?
8. Who wrote the "Battle Hymn of the Republic?"
9. What is the difference between High and Low German?
10. Who made the longest speech ever delivered in Congress?

The answers to these questions may be found in tomorrow's paper.

Here are the answers to Saturday's questions.

1. A Chinese cycle is 60 years long.
2. Queen Victoria was originally Miss Azon von Este. She was descended from Azon, margrave of Este.
3. The Suez Canal is between Africa and Asia.
4. Calliope was the muse of eloquence and heroic poetry.
5. Silver is the best conductor for electricity. Copper comes second and gold third.
6. "Rule of thumb" means measurement by the thumb, as in carpentry. By extension it means any simple method of measurement, practical rather than accurate or scientific.
7. "Dago" is a corruption of the Spanish proper name "Diego," corresponding to the English "James." It is a slang word applied to dark complexioned foreigners. It is said that American sailors first called the West Indians "Diegos" because there were so many of them who bore that name.
8. President John Tyler had more children than any other President of the United States. He had 14 children by two marriages. Eight were sons and six were daughters.
9. Tuberculosis is often called the "white plague" because it takes a greater toll of life than any other disease. "White" was probably applied to it to distinguish it from the "black plague."
10. The minor children of a foreigner automatically become citizens when their father takes out naturalization papers.

How Old Are You?

If you feel like 60 at the age of 45—think this over! It may help you get back your pep of earlier years. Many men often have slight stomach disorders, nervous attacks and weak spells. They think little about them. But suppose your physician told you some of these slight attacks were symptoms of System Poisoning—professionally called "TOXEMIA"—guess you'd sit up and take notice! It's an insidious malady that steals your vital energy, slowly but surely. You sometimes take ordinary laxative pills and waters, but they don't dislodge the poisonous toxins that cling to intestinal lining—the deadly bacteria that cause senility and make you look and feel old in years before you should. Why don't you take Partola, the internal antiseptic and laxative that positively cleans out the poison wastes? Do so for a while, then see your natural strength return, health improve, ambition and power of endurance increase. Bowel disorders and stomach troubles disappear when you take Partola. STATE FEDERATION HEAD VISITS CARRICK MOTHERS

"For an organization to pass resolutions and not to furnish the machinery to see that those resolutions are carried out, makes it about as effective as a grade school debating team," said Mrs. John B. Hamme, president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, in her initial visit to the Mothers' Club of Carrick Saturday afternoon. It was president's day with the Carrick club and Mrs. Hamme, who came to Pittsburgh a few days ahead for the federation convention, shared honors with Mrs. M. A. Keffer, the new executive head of the Mothers, and Mrs. W. H. McCombs, the retiring leader. As is the custom with the organization, its honorary president and founder, Mrs. John M. Phillips, presided and performed that office with her usual graciousness and tact, and bespoke a broad and kindly hospitality for "the strangers within the gates" this week. Corsages were presented to the two local presidents and each visitor was presented with an exquisite yellow rose. There was a particularly lovely recital by Miss Mabel King, contralto, with Mrs. Ruth Glasser Beismeyer at the piano, but Mrs. Hamme's talk was the chief event of the afternoon.

"That women can accomplish things; that they do work collectively and with oneness and with their whole souls; that they combine so much of idealism and practicality," Mrs. Hamme says she has learned in her four years as Federation leader. She expressed herself as overwhelmed with the warmth of her reception and the size of her audience, but any one could have told her that the Carrick Mothers are a warmhearted band and that they always work enthusiastically and "with oneness." Her talk was her swan song, Mrs. Hamme said, for she goes out of office at the close of the convention this week. A score of visiting presidents from all over the Pittsburgh district were present and were given recognition from the floor, but did not, however, speak. Thus the program was kept within the time limits.

The little homey club on Spokane avenue was in its bravest array for the occasion. The house has been newly painted outside, the floors have been done over and the windows are gay with bright new cretonne curtains, and white crinkle cloth shades. Vases and bowls of garden flowers added their note of color and joy to the occasion.

For the fifth time in 28 years Pittsburgh is the hostess city for the annual convention of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women. The thirty-second annual convention will formally open tonight with a reception to officers, delegates, visiting and local club women in the Hotel Schenley at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. John B. Hamme of York, president of the federation, and her official family will form the receiving line. An orchestra will play during the entire reception and there will be special program numbers by a quartet composed of Joseph Donaghy, I. D. Schaffer, Carl McVicker and R. M. Gibbs, with Walter Poynts at the piano. Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsay is in charge of the reception.

The five-day convention was given its first impetus when the executive board met in the Schenley Hotel at 10:30 o'clock this morning. This afternoon many of the women who were already registered paid a visit to the children's department at Carnegie Library under auspices of the division of literature of which Mrs. Samuel C. Grier is chairman. There was a library tea and conference with an exhibition of book plates and early American children's books and a talk by Miss Lide Edwards. Among the topics discussed at the conference were "Glimpses of World Relations Through Literature," "Literature for the Blind," "How to Produce Amateur Plays," "A Successful Campaign Against Objectionable Publications," "The Moving Bookshelf" and "How We Conducted Children's Book Week in Our Town." The meeting was conducted by Mrs. W. J. Ryman of Girard.

The presidents' dinner, an institutional feature of federation conventions, will be held at 6 o'clock tonight in the University Club and will be attended by presidents, past presidents and presidents-elect of the affiliated clubs and county federations. Aside from the discussion of problems, the only program feature will be readings by Mrs. J. Charles Wilson.

TRIANGLE ENDS AS WIFE CALLS IN RIVAL

Efforts of Mrs. Marie Ensign, 25, of 1304 Federal street, to settle one of those triangle affairs in a sociable sort of way brought $50 into the Morals Court treasury today—all because Joseph Ensign, 28, the husband, took occasion to get excited about it.

Marie told Magistrate A. D. Brandon she learned, through letters found in her husband's pockets, that he was running around with Elsie Schwartz, 23, of Painesville, O. So she went to Painesville and brought Elsie up to the Ensign home here.

Joseph was called in and told to take his pick and from then on to hold his peace and quit philandering around. During the conference Joseph became unruly and threatened to shoot anyone who left the room, although it was testified he had no gun. Police were called and all arrested.

In Morals Court today, Elsie and Joseph were fined $25 each after the husband had decided he liked his wife best and Elsie had promised to leave him alone. The two women left together, apparently on friendly terms.

COAL POLICEMAN HELD IN SUITCASE THEFT

The LIFE AND LETTERS OF WOODROW WILSON

Wilson Thrilled by His Successful Authorship

The Writing and Publication of "Congressional Government" That Firmly Established Wilson's Literary Fame

In the Sunday installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" published in the Sun-Telegraph yesterday the humanness of the War President was brought into relief by Biographer Baker. He loved baseball and the theater. As diversions that he could not often indulge they possessed special value to him. At this time he broadened his reading, being greatly helped by Miss Axson. And he sat under James Bryce, then making his studies for his great work, "The American Commonwealth," and delivering a series of lectures at Johns Hopkins.

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

Copyright, 1927, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

Wilson's First Success

ON JANUARY 1, 1884, Wilson was ready to begin work on his first book, the one which was destined to bring him recognition extraordinary for one so young. He wrote eagerly to Ellen Axson on October 30, 1883:

"I've opened the new year by a day of diligent work on my favorite constitutional studies. I've planned a set of four or five essays on 'The Government of the Union,' in which it is my purpose to show, as well as I can, our constitutional system as it looks in operation. My desire and ambition are to treat the American Constitution as Mr. Bagehot (do you remember Mr. Bagehot, about whom I talked to you one night on the veranda at Asheville?) has treated the English Constitution. His book has inspired my whole study of our government.

"He brings to the work a fresh and original method which has made the British system much more intelligible to ordinary men than it ever was before, and which, if it could be successfully applied to the exposition of our Federal Constitution, would result in something like a revelation to those who are still reading 'The Federalist' as an authoritative constitutional manual. An immense literature has already accumulated upon this subject; but I venture to think that the greater part of it is either irrelevant or already antiquated. 'An observer who looks at the living reality will wonder at the contrast to the paper description. He will see in the life much which is not in the books; and he will not find in the rough practice many refinements of the literary theory.'"

Steady Grind of Copying

He works steadily and hard at his task, writing out his chapters first in the beautiful clear-cut characters of his shorthand, as delicately penciled as a drawing, afterward copying them out on his typewriter. Some of them he reads aloud to fellow students—Albert Shaw was one of them—eagerly seeking criticism. In March he says:

"On last Thursday my caligraph was going all day long, as it was also on Friday and Saturday; for 'essay No. 3' was finished on Wednesday evening and had then to be copied in the fair hand of my machine. Copying is a terribly tedious business—especially copying one's own work; and the copying of these three essays is by no means a small job; there will be about 170 pages of—of caligraphiscript—by the time I have copied the 40 pages that remain; and you can imagine the effect upon my spirits of this task of grinding off hour after hour the sentences of which I am now so tired—of spending a whole day with the style which is so disgusting to me. It is very unnatural, I know, to have such feelings towards my own offspring, but I can't like it. I am comforting myself, as Lycias did, with the reflection that others into whose hands these essays come will probably read them only once and so escape the contempt bred by familiarity."

On April 4 he takes his courage in his hands—keeping his purpose secret—and sends the first few chapters to Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston. He says in his letter:

"As a constitutional study the subject is, as you will perceive, a new one. Not that I have brought out any hitherto unseen facts; I have simply grouped facts which have not before stood together, and thus given them the setting of a new treatment. I have modeled by work chiefly on Mr. Bagehot's essays on the English Constiution, though I have been guided in some points of treatment by the method followed in some of the better volumes of Macmillan's admirable 'English Citizen Series.'"

The response he receives, while not definite as to the publication of the book when completed, gives him great encouragement, and he goes at his task with renewed determination.

Never Saw Congress Work

During all the years of preparation for writing his book, he never actually attended a session of Congress—although at Baltimore he was only an hour away. So far as the record discloses he was never in the halls of Congress but once before he went there in 1913 to deliver his first message. It was his belief that he could understand the real business of government, which was conducted behind the closed doors of committee rooms, better from a thorough study of the documents than by the observation of the procedure on the floor.

Immediately after his return to Johns Hopkins in October, the great manuscript is completed. He writes: "I have just finished preparing my ms. to be sent to Boston and am about to start out for the express office. Then I shall be free to turn to my university work until the ms. is returned and has to be sent to some other publishing house."

He sent the work to Houghton, Mifflin & Co.—and like the wholly unknown author that he is, he is prepared for the worst.

On November 28 Wilson can write exultantly that he has "some exceptionally good news":

"They have actually offered me as good terms as if I were already a well-known writer. The success is of such proportions as almost to take my breath away—it has distanced my biggest hopes."

He is momentarily in a seventh heaven of elation, but this is followed almost immediately by a temperamental reaction which is highly characteristic of the man. Success never long satisfies him. His aspirations are inappeasable. He can rest upon no victory; he must press on to greater things.

There is the grand moment, known to every author, when he feels the actual bound copies of his first book in his hands—a never-to-be-forgotten thrill. To whom shall he send the first fruits of his soul—the book over which he has toiled long, hoped greatly, despaired bitterly! In Wilson's case there could be no doubt: the first must go to Ellen. He writes on January 24, 1885:

"I received two copies of 'Congressional Government' last evening and immediately reversed the wrappers about one of them and sent it off to you—in hopes that you would get it before Sunday. I took time only to write your name upon the fly leaf; but that cost some 10 minutes, because it was so hard to decide what to write! Of course, however, I had to refrain from putting anything more than I did put. I had to say everything or nothing—and what I wanted to put would have been out of place on the public face of a book.

"I wanted to say that everything in the book was yours already, having been written in the light and under the inspiration of your love; that every word of it was written as if to you, with thoughts of what you would think of it, and speculations as to your delight should it receive favor from the publishers and the public; that, as your love runs through this, my first book, so it must be the enabling power in all that I may write hereafter, for without your entire love and faith and sympathy it must be also the last book into which I could put any of myself; that, in presenting it to you, I was presenting it to one whose praise and approval are a thousand times sweeter and more essential to me than the praise and approval of the whole world of critics and readers. In sending you my first book, darling, I renew the gift of myself."

Filial Dedication

He had kept the dedication of the book a complete secret. It was to his father:

TO
THE PATIENT GUIDE OF HIS YOUTH,
THE GRACIOUS COMPANION
OF HIS MANHOOD
HIS BEST INSTRUCTOR
AND MOST LENIENT CRITIC,
THIS BOOK IS AFFECTIONATELY DEDICATED BY THE AUTHOR

He sends it on with his love and awaits eagerly the reply:

"Wilmington, Friday, Jan. 30, '85.

"My precious Son—

"Your book has been received and gloated over. The 'dedication' took me by surprise and never have I felt such a blow of love. Shall I confess it? I wept and sobbed in the stir of the glad pain. God bless you, my noble child, for such a token of your affection.

"I cannot write you at length touching the contents of the volume which is so dear to my pride. I have read portions of it, more than once, with an ever-new admiration. You have cause for thankfulness and for courage.

"The love we all feel for you is as large as possible.

"Your own affc—

"FATHER."

INSPIRING CRITICS OF HIS FIRST BOOK

Albert Shaw, editor of the "Review of Reviews," and Gamaliel Bradford, the historian, whose critiques of "Congressional Government," Woodrow Wilson's first book, greatly encouraged him to go on with his monumental work.

SECOND NEWS SECTION THE SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS FEATURES

MONDAY· OCTOBER 10· 1927

He has also that delicious experience of the young author, nervously, and quite anonymously, slipping into a bookstore to purchase a copy of his own book:

"I had a comical experience, by the way, in my attempt to make the purchase. The first clerk I approached did not know the book and asked me 'if I remembered who it was by'! I simulated an air of difficult recollection and told him that it was written by a man named Wilson. He inquired of an elderly gentleman about 'Wilson's "Congressional Government"' and was told that all the copies had been sold but that more had been ordered."

And then the reviews! The rushes of hope, the moments of dejection, the hot anger, the deep gratitude, when the reviews come in. It is noteworthy that the very first review he received was one written by a man who was in after years to play a great part in his career—Walter H. Page—in "The Charlotte (N. C.) Chronicle" for January 20, 1885. He is delighted also with the "unqualified praise" of his former law partner at Atlanta, Renick; and Robert Bridges, his dearest friend, writes that Garrison of "The Nation" is greatly interested in the book and will have it reviewed by Gamaliel Bradford, of Boston. What joy! Of all men Bradford is the best possible, and of all journals "The Nation" is the most valuable.

Some Comments Hurt

Bradford's great review appears in the "Nation" on February 12, 1885—and starts out with sentences which must have satisfied the most ambitious of young authors:

"We have no hesitation in saying that this is one of the most important books, dealing with political subjects, which have ever issued from the American press. We have often been asked by students of politics and by foreign visitors for some book which would explain the real working of our government, and have been obliged to confess that there was none in existence. Of those which explain the origin of the Constitution, the intentions of its framers, and the meaning of its provisions, the name is legion; but of what the government established by it has actually become after a century of history, if there is any expositor it has escaped our search. . . . This want Mr. Wilson has come forward to supply. His book is evidently modeled on Mr. Bagehot's 'English Constitution,' and it will, though the praise is so high as to be almost extravagant, bear comparison with that inestimable work. . . ."

But the triumph of the book—and a real triumph it is, the first edition being sold out within a few weeks—is marred by "slighting or sneering" comments, such as any strong or original book is bound to provoke. He delights in Albert Shaw's review, but the comments in the "Independent" and the "Sun" are critical, and "a sneering review" of the book "in a small local sheet of no circulation" cuts him to the raw and sends him tramping the streets to work off his bitterness. He is as proud and sensitive as he is ambitious!

But the book from the very beginning was a notable success. It opened a new field of constructive criticism; it was the forerunner of much thinking and writing on the political institutions of America. James Bryce read it with enthusiasm and quoted from it in "The American Commonwealth." It was later translated into several foreign languages and had (by 1926) run through 29 editions. It made such an impression upon an officer in the United States Navy, Rear Admiral Chadwick, that he placed a copy in every ship of the Navy; and in 1892 it won for Wilson the John Marshall prize given by Johns Hopkins University. Judged by any standard it was a remarkable achievement—all the more amazing because it was written by a university student of 28 who carried forward its production in addition to all the work of his courses.

Appreciation of Bradford

We have also a glimpse of the joy of those early triumphs in a letter written years afterward to Gamaliel Bradford's son by Mrs. Wilson and here published through the courtesy of Mr. Bradford:

"You must know that a certain almost sentimental interest clings to your name for me, because of the extreme joy I derived from reading your father's review of 'Congressional Government!' It was the first important recognition of his work from a high authority, and the praise was so generous, yet discriminating! It was in truth an epoch in the lives of two young people, and I, for one, could scarcely sleep for happiness because of it. We were engaged at the time; he was a Fellow at Johns Hopkins and I was working at the Art Students' League in New York."

Considerable space has been given to "Congressional Government" for it, with the two articles which led up to it and a later book, "Constitutional Government in the United States," published in 1908—just when he was beginning to be talked about as a possible political leader—represent the backbone of Wilson's political thinking.

Tomorrow's chapter, leading up to the marriage of Woodrow Wilson and Ellen Axson, will trace the young student's mental struggles resulting in his decision to become a teacher of politics and government affairs rather than to enter the field of active politics.

DETECTIVE ACCUSED IN BRIBE

GAVE $10 FOR RAID TIP WOMAN CHARGES

Florence Brunner, precinct detective attached to the Center avenue station, was scheduled to appear before the police trial board late today to explain charges made by Lena Washington, 33, Negro, that Brunner accepted $10 from her for advance information on a raid on a speakeasy at Logan street and Wylie avenue, of which she is said to be part owner.

The woman made an affidavit to her charges in Morals Court yesterday, where she was fined $100 when she appeared with Lehman Smith, Negro, her alleged partner, following a raid on her place in which Brunner took part. Fifty-two visitors were taken into custody in the place, some of whom were fined $5 or $10.

Brunner denied the woman's charges and said they were voiced as part of her expressed vow of vengeance for his activities against her establishment. He has raided the place four times within a year, he said.

Four other alleged disorderly houses were raided by Police Inspector John P. Clancey over the weekend. George Sal, arrested at 422 Strawberry way, was held for further investigation in Morals Court. Police said they found liquor at his place. Joe Maira, 34, of 814 Wylie avenue was fined $100 on charges of conducting a disorderly house at 801 Clay way, where police reported confiscating liquor. Joe Archer paid $100 for his activities at 622 Fifth avenue, where he was arrested with three women and eight men visitors. The women were sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse, four of the men were fined $10 each and four released "when they told the truth." R. Rosenberg was fined $100 as a result of a raid on his place at 1408 Fifth avenue. Police said they found liquor there. One visitor paid $10 and two others $15 each.

30 TO 35 MILES PER GALLON FOR FORDS

DETROIT, Oct. 10.—(INS.)—Henry Ford's new car will achieve a maximum speed of from 60 to 65 miles an hour with a gasoline consumption of from 30 to 35 miles a gallon, it was learned here today from sources close to the "flivver" king.

This information was obtained as comment upon reports from the Orient that Ford dealers in China were advertising the new car capable of getting 60 miles to the gallon of gasoline. The Ford authority said the new car would be far more economical of gasoline than any other car on the market, but that it would scarcely approach the 60-mile-a-gallon figure. On cross-country travel, it was said, the new car would get at least 35 miles to the gallon, but in city traffic, the average would be from 28 to 30 miles a gallon.

The new car, however, will be guaranteed to operate at a sustained speed of from 60 to 65 miles an hour, it was explained, and this information probably was misinterpreted by the Orient dealers. The remainder of the description of the new car, carried in the China advertisements, it was said, was approximately correct. This included the declarations that the new car would have a standard gear shift with three forward speeds and reverse, a 34-horsepower motor and a wheelbase of 104 inches.

2 DIE IN GREEK, BULGAR FIGHT

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—A clash between Greek soldiers and Bulgarian comitadjis on Greek territory near Gornitsova, in which two of the irregulars were killed, was reported in Athens today. Bombs were found on the bodies, the advices stated.

The Greek government, which has had occasion in the past to complain to Bulgaria concerning comitadji activities, is watching the Serbo-Bulgarian situation closely, especially as the Italian press is supporting Bulgaria, but recognizes the inability of the Bulgarian government to suppress the comitadjis unless supported through the League of Nations.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., GIVES $1,750,000 TO U. OF C.

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 10.—A gift of $1,750,000 to the University of California from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was announced by President Campbell. The money, according to the president, will be used for the erection of an "International House" on the campus, accommodating 500 students and affording opportunity for social contact between foreign and American students, stipulated by the terms of the donation.

Rogers Bets Cal's 'I Do Not Choose' Means He Will

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 10.—This is to my friend, Arthur Brisbane.

Now, Arthur, here is the proposition. You keep saying Coolidge won't run. I have always said he would. Not because he wanted to, but because he has to. Now I am not for a moment conceited enough to think my opinion is as good as yours on any subject. But you writers can write one way and believe another, but no man bets one way and believes another. In fact, the only way to back an opinion is by some deed or some money, not by an editorial. So I will bet you $5,000 that he runs.

WILL ROGERS.

No ifs about it. I bet he runs, you bet he doesn't—the winner to give the $5,000 to charity, preferably to form a society for the advancement of political knowledge.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

P. S.—Have Hearst endorse check. There is such a thing as a man becoming land and property poor.

Another P. S.—This whole thing is not any joke either. When a comedian bets $5,000 it's a serious business.

John Nye Sees Anderson Trying to Make Love to Unwilling Sally

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

SALLY JEROME is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. MRS. JEROME enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work afternoons. BEAU and MILLIE, her brother and sister, give nothing towards the upkeep of the home. TED SLOAN is in love with Sally and wants her to marry him. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, for whom Millie works. He is blindly infatuated with Millie, who is having a love affair with a bond salesman named DAVIDSON. While Millie is ill with appendicitis, Sally works for John Nye, and he offers her a permanent place in his office. But Sally refuses the position and goes into the wayside inn business with her AUNT EMILY JEROME. The business does not prosper until Aunt Em hires a jazz band and Sally puts on a nightly exhibition dance with Ted Sloan for dancing partner—all this to the horror of Mrs. Jerome, who has brought the whole family to live at Aunt Em's, including Beau's new wife, MABEL. Beau does nothing but pile up dishonorable debts. A coldness springs up between Millie and John Nye. One night Nye comes out to the inn and comes upon Sally in the arms of Ted Sloan. He goes away without a word, to the bewilderment of Sally. That night Ted admits that he is ashamed of dancing publicly, and after that Sally dances alone. Mabel's baby is born, and shortly afterward Beau starts running around nights. Mabel decides he has too much freedom and plans to go to work to furnish a home of their own, while Sally tends the baby. She gets a position in John Nye's office after Millie leaves it—because, so she says, John Nye insulted her with his attentions. Later she goes to work in Davidson's office. Mr. Jerome returns home very sick, and one afternoon Sally and her mother hear him groan and then fall out of bed. The doctor advises that he be sent away to recuperate. Aunt Emily agrees to lend Sally the necessary money.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

WITH a swift, graceful smile at her aunt she turned and hurried up stairs to break the good news of the trip to Mrs. Jerome.

On the first day of blue-and-gold October Mr. and Mrs. Jerome and Millie started away for their trip to Bermuda.

Their train left early in the morning, and Aunt Emily and Sally saw them off and were back home in time for an 8 o'clock breakfast.

The house was unbelievably quiet when they unlocked the front door and stepped into the wide, white-paneled hall. It was like Aunt Emily's house in the old days before it had been turned into The House by the Side of the Road.

Aunt Emily, herself, drew a long, contented sigh as she and Sally sat down to breakfast before the snapping little wood fire in the hall.

"Isn't this like the old days?" she asked, pushing the tea wagon nearer to the friendly blaze, and lifting the cover from the silver platter of toast. "No Millie talking nonsense to some man over the phone. No groans from Clara Margaretta, complaining of the toe-ache. No baby yelling for a bottle—"

The baby had been a great worry to Aunt Emily. And she had taken no pains to hide her relief the night before, when Mabel had taken it away with her to the newly-furnished flat where she and Beau had set up housekeeping for the second time.

"Peace!" said Aunt Emily. "Peace and quiet!" She looked around the big hall with great contentment in her angular face. She loved her old maid's castle.

But Sally was lonely.

She missed her mother. She missed her father, and she actually found herself missing Millie's light-hearted, inconsequential chatter. Most of all, she missed the baby.

There was a great deal of the mother in Sally, as there is in every girl who is born to be a sweetheart, a wife, and a home maker. It was as natural for her to look after a baby as it was to water and tend a dying begonia plant or a sick geranium, or to bring in a stray kitten and give it milk in a saucer. She was a love, was Sally. She was all love—warm-hearted, tender-hearted, and kind-hearted.

There was loveliness within her as well as loveliness that could be seen in her blue eyes, her wide, happy smile, and her bodily grace. And that is a rare combination in this world of ours—as any man who knows women can tell you if he wants to.

At 6 o'clock that night Sally slipped into the gypsy costume of gay calico and flaming silk all sewn with little brass bells.

For she was to dance again that night for the first time in three weeks. The jazz orchestra was to play once more, too, now that Mr. Jerome was out of the house.

"Mother wanted me to promise not to dance any more," Sally told Aunt Em when she slipped down to the kitchen at half past six, with a white apron tied over her Romany dress.

Aunt Em sniffed with indignation. "Yes, but she's perfectly willing to take the money that you've earned dancing, isn't she?" she asked sharply. "They all think you've disgraced the family by dancing in a cabaret—as they call my perfectly respectable dining room, but the money we make suits them to a T!" She banged a tray down on the table, and began to pile water glasses upon it.

"There's a friend of yours in the dining room," she said shortly. "That Mr. Davidson. Better go in and speak to him. He asked for you."

Davidson was sitting all alone at a table in front of the windows, idly smoking a cigaret.

He did not get up as she crossed the room to him and sat down on the other side of his table. He was very good looking, but he certainly had no manners.

"Hello," he said, and promptly tried to cover her hands with his own, as Sally folded them on the cloth before her.

She drew them away.

"How have you been?" she asked, with her brilliant, friendly smile. "I haven't seen you for ages and ages—two or three months."

He grinned. "No, and you never would have seen me if I hadn't heard that Millie had left town," he said, with a quick nod of his blond head. "She called me up yesterday to say she was going away this morning—so I came to see you tonight. What do you think of that, my lady?"

Sally did not know what to think, so she said nothing at all. Her face, serious and frank with its direct, honest gaze and quiet lips, was not the kind of face that harmonized with her gay gypsy costume and the bright bandanna handkerchief bound about her head. There was nothing of the gypsy about Sally—until she started to dance. Then she always brightened up until she looked like Joy and Carnival personified. She loved to dance.

"Kid," said Davidson, softly, hoarsely, "I'm crazy about you, still. I don't know why—because you've always walked all over me as if I were a floor mat. But I am."

"Please don't keep on talking to me like this, Mr. Davidson," said Sally, with a quiver in her voice. "It embarrasses me. Truly it does. I want you to tell me something. How did Millie happen to quit working for you—that is, in your office? Why did she leave it?"

She thought she knew.

As a matter of fact, all she knew was what Millie had told her . . . the same old story about Davy's getting "entirely too gay" with her, as many another man had—according to Millie.

And so she was speechless when Davidson answered her as he did answer her.

"Oh, she got up on her high horse because I wanted her to fix up a party with you and that Sloan guy of yours," he said, in a rather shame-faced way. "She knew how I felt about you—guessed it, I suppose. And she said she hadn't reached the point where she was framing up love affairs for her sister."

"Is that the truth?" Sally asked, after fully three minutes. "Are you sure that's why she left your office?"

"Sure, I'm sure." His tone was impatient. "And, moreover, what I'm telling you is the truth. I didn't come out here tonight to lie to you. I've gone hay-wire about you, and I've come to tell you so."

He got quickly to his feet, took a swift look around the empty dining room, and then came around the table and caught her tightly in his arms.

Without a sound Sally bent herself backward, and turned her face away from him to escape the kiss that he finally managed to plant on the soft nape of her neck. Turned thus, she could see into the hall. A man stood there, with his hat in his hand, and his dark eyes on her and Davidson. He came slowly into the room. It was John Nye. The very last person on earth that Sally wanted to have seen her at that moment, of course!

"Things always turn out like this!" she said to herself, savagely, as she tore herself away from Davidson.

CHAPTER LVIII.

BEFORE Sally could reach him, John Nye had pulled out a chair and seated himself at one of the little tables against the wall.

For all the greeting that he gave her as she came hurrying up to him, she might have been Aunt Em's little waitress, Hilda.

And for all the welcome that Sally gave him, he might have been any total stranger dropping in at Aunt Em's inn for chicken and corn fritters and apple pie.

"The regular dinner, please," said John, just glancing at her, frowningly.

Now, Sally was not the sort of person to take off-hand treatment like this "lying down" like the proverbial door mat. She had her pride, and a very high-handed nose-in-the-air sort of pride it was.

"I'll send you a waitress," said she. "You can give her your order." And her red lips came together with a snap that would have done credit to Aunt Em, who took nothing from anybody.

With her chin held high she went slowly across the room and vanished into the kitchen to give Hilda the order for John Nye's dinner.

When she came back into the dining room he had lit a cigaret and was staring moodily out of the window into the soft October dusk as he smoked it.

Sally could not make him out. She could not tell whether he was embarassed because he had come upon Davy making love to her, or whether he was nervous because he had come there, hoping to find Millie and make up his quarrel with her, or whether he was just hungry. Some men were bad-tempered and grumpy when they were hungry, and perhaps John Nye was one of that sort.

But, no; she remembered suddenly that he often had let his lunchtime go by in the days when she had worked for him in his office. He was one of those lean, active, quick-minded men who seldom give a thought to what they are going to eat or when they are going to eat it.

"Maybe I ought to tell him that Millie's on her way to take the boat to Bermuda," she said to herself, and went back to his table.

He looked up sternly.

"I hope you didn't come to see Millie, Mr. Nye," she said quietly. "She's not in town. She left this morning to go to—"

"Yes, I had a note from her," he broke in, with a nod of the dark, handsome head that Sally in spite of herself, always wanted to stroke with her two hands, whenever she looked at him. "She wanted me to forward any letters to her that came to my office. Here are two."

He slipped his hand into his coat pocket and flung two of them down upon the table.

Sally picked them up, and without a word of thanks, went over to the table by the windows where Davidson sat watching her with his gray eyes.

"Sit down," he said shortly, and Sally sat.

It gave her an odd sense of satisfaction to sit here with him in plain sight of John Nye.

"If John thinks that I brought him sandwiches and flowers for his desk because I was crazy about him, this ought to put that notion out of his head," she thought, leaning toward Davidson, without hearing a word that he was saying to her, so deep in thought she was at that instant.

And yet she had been in love with John Nye, during the days when she worked for him. And she was still.

Love's Embers

Dicky Takes a Sudden Interest in the Transvanians

I LOOKED sharply at Dicky as he made the comment that Philip Veritzen must have loved the rulers of Transvania very dearly because he did not miss a single function in their honor. Could it be possible that he would carry his jealous rancor against my employer to the extent of uttering a cruel gibe about him to the man's son? The next second, however, I acquitted him of malice. I could see that he simply was carrying on Noel's remarks concerning his father's love for his native Transvania.

Noel apparently saw nothing out of the way in Dicky's words.

"No, I saw his name in the list of guests at every one," he said, then flushed again as I think he realized what his words implied. My heart ached for the lonely boy, banished from his father's presence, whose only knowledge of that father's movements was gleaned from the daily newspapers.

With characteristic tact and kindly heart, Dicky noticed the flush and turned the subject abruptly:

"Katie still in her own sphere?" he asked me, laughing.

"Perfectly safe," I answered, playing up to him.

"Then let us hear the tale in which she is the heroine and the unknown Transvanians the villains. Listen, everybody. This promises to be good, if Katie is concerned. She's a whole vaudeville act in herself, that girl."

His mother sniffed. "That's what's the matter with her," she said caustically. I hurried into my tale in order to choke off any further strictures upon my little maid.

I could not have asked for a more attentive audience as I related the story of the savage dog's spring toward Jerry Ticer, of the commands which stopped it and the direction to stand still, shouted in perfect English to Jerry, although both of our unpleasant and unwelcome neighbors professed ignorance of our language. I told them of Jim's remark that the language the men were speaking was like that of the new tenant of The Larches, whom we had seen earlier in the day, and said that Katie pronounced them both Transvanian. Last I retailed the ruse which I had employed to get Katie into the yard and the tall man's command to his comrade to talk French, as the girl knew the other language. Dicky started perceptibly when I came to that part of the story, and when I finished immediately afterward, he said reflectively:

"Now, how could he tell that she could speak Transvanian?"

"I don't think he knew it," I returned. "I think he deduced it from the fact that I went in the house, then came out again and told Jim not to be discouraged, to have the men keep on talking slowly, and that he might get their meaning. When Katie appeared, he probably reasoned that I had brought her out purposely to listen. Indeed," I smiled reminiscently, "she was so theatrical that it would have been almost impossible for a keen observer not to notice something unusual about her."

Dicky shook his head.

"Too far-fetched for men of the type you describe. They must be something other than they seem, especially the taller one. Describe him again for me, will you please?"

I went over the man's description very carefully, and Dicky asked several questions, which told me that he was estimating the man's height, and building up a mental picture of him. But when I had finished, he made but one comment.

"They're probably just what they say they are," he said, "but with Junior and you women around there's no use taking chances on that dog. I'll step up to that shack before I go back and take a look at 'em. I probably can manage enough French so that I can make 'em understand they have to keep the dog chained up."

"I shall be glad if you do," I said, and indeed I felt the lifting of responsibility which comes to every woman when her husband takes upon himself some burden which she has been carrying. "But it is another call which I want you to make with me tomorrow afternoon. Indeed"—I picked up everybody on the veranda with my glance—"I want you all to go with me to The Larches, to call on our new neighbors, the Lincolns."

U. S. DROPS 200 LIQUOR PROSECUTIONS HERE

500 MORE RUM CASES TO BE ABANDONED

Because of insufficient evidence to warrant further prosecution, 120 suits, involving 200 defendants charged with violations of the national prohibition law, were nolle prossed today by United States District Attorney John D. Meyer. This number, it was said, will be increased within the next week by more than 500 other liquor suits.

The filing of the nolle prosses by the District Attorney was with approval of the prohibition department, as in each of the cases the principal government witnesses are men no longer in the prohibition service, many of whom were dismissed and whose testimony, it was said, was not dependable.

Most of the defendants were caught in raids made during the administrations of F. C. Baird and John D. Pennington as prohibition administrators. Dropping the cases in which conclusive testimony is not available, the District Attorney said, w... greatly relieve congestion of the court calendar and give him an opportunity to begin early prosecution of more important and recent liquor law cases.

RABBI EXHORTS METHODIST AID

"The Jewish Palestine expects the moral support of world Christendom in the effort to establish a world brotherhood," the Rev. Herman Hailperin, rabbi of the Tree of Life Synagogue, told the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal congregation when he addressed it last night on "The Jew in Palestine."

He termed the Palestine movement a practical working out of a most unusual instrument for world brotherhood.

"Visit the Jewish colonies, fitted with American tractors and farm machinery, and you see East and West united; inspect the Hadassah hospitals and health centers all over Palestine, where Jews, Christians and Arabs are received on the same footing, and you will behold a perfect harmonizing of the East and West," he said.

FIVE HORSES BURNED IN FIRE NEAR TYRONE

PITT ZOOLOGIST DARES DEATH FOR BEETLES

Dr. Samuel H. Williams, head of the department of zoology, University of Pittsburgh, today is on has way to Breslau, Germany, with his wife to spend a year at Breslau University completing a study of beetles which nearly cost him his life in the jungles of British Guiana. The zoologist, here for a week, gave a brief synopsis of his near-fatal experiences this summer. These included being deserted by his native guides and helpers between Waratuk and Amatuck Falls on the Cuyuni River, where he was stranded, almost without provisions, for eight days.

He succeeded in getting to Tuckheit, at the foot of the Kaiterur Falls on the Potaro River, and brought back many specimens and much information of scientific value. He had hoped to reach the plateaus of Kukenaam and Roraima about which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote "The Lost World." While he was absent word reached Georgetown that he had been killed by guide, since he was in a section not far from where an English explorer met death in this way.

The Magoon home was in Elgin avenue. He was a member of the Oakmont Golf Club. His widow, Minnie E. Magoon, survives.

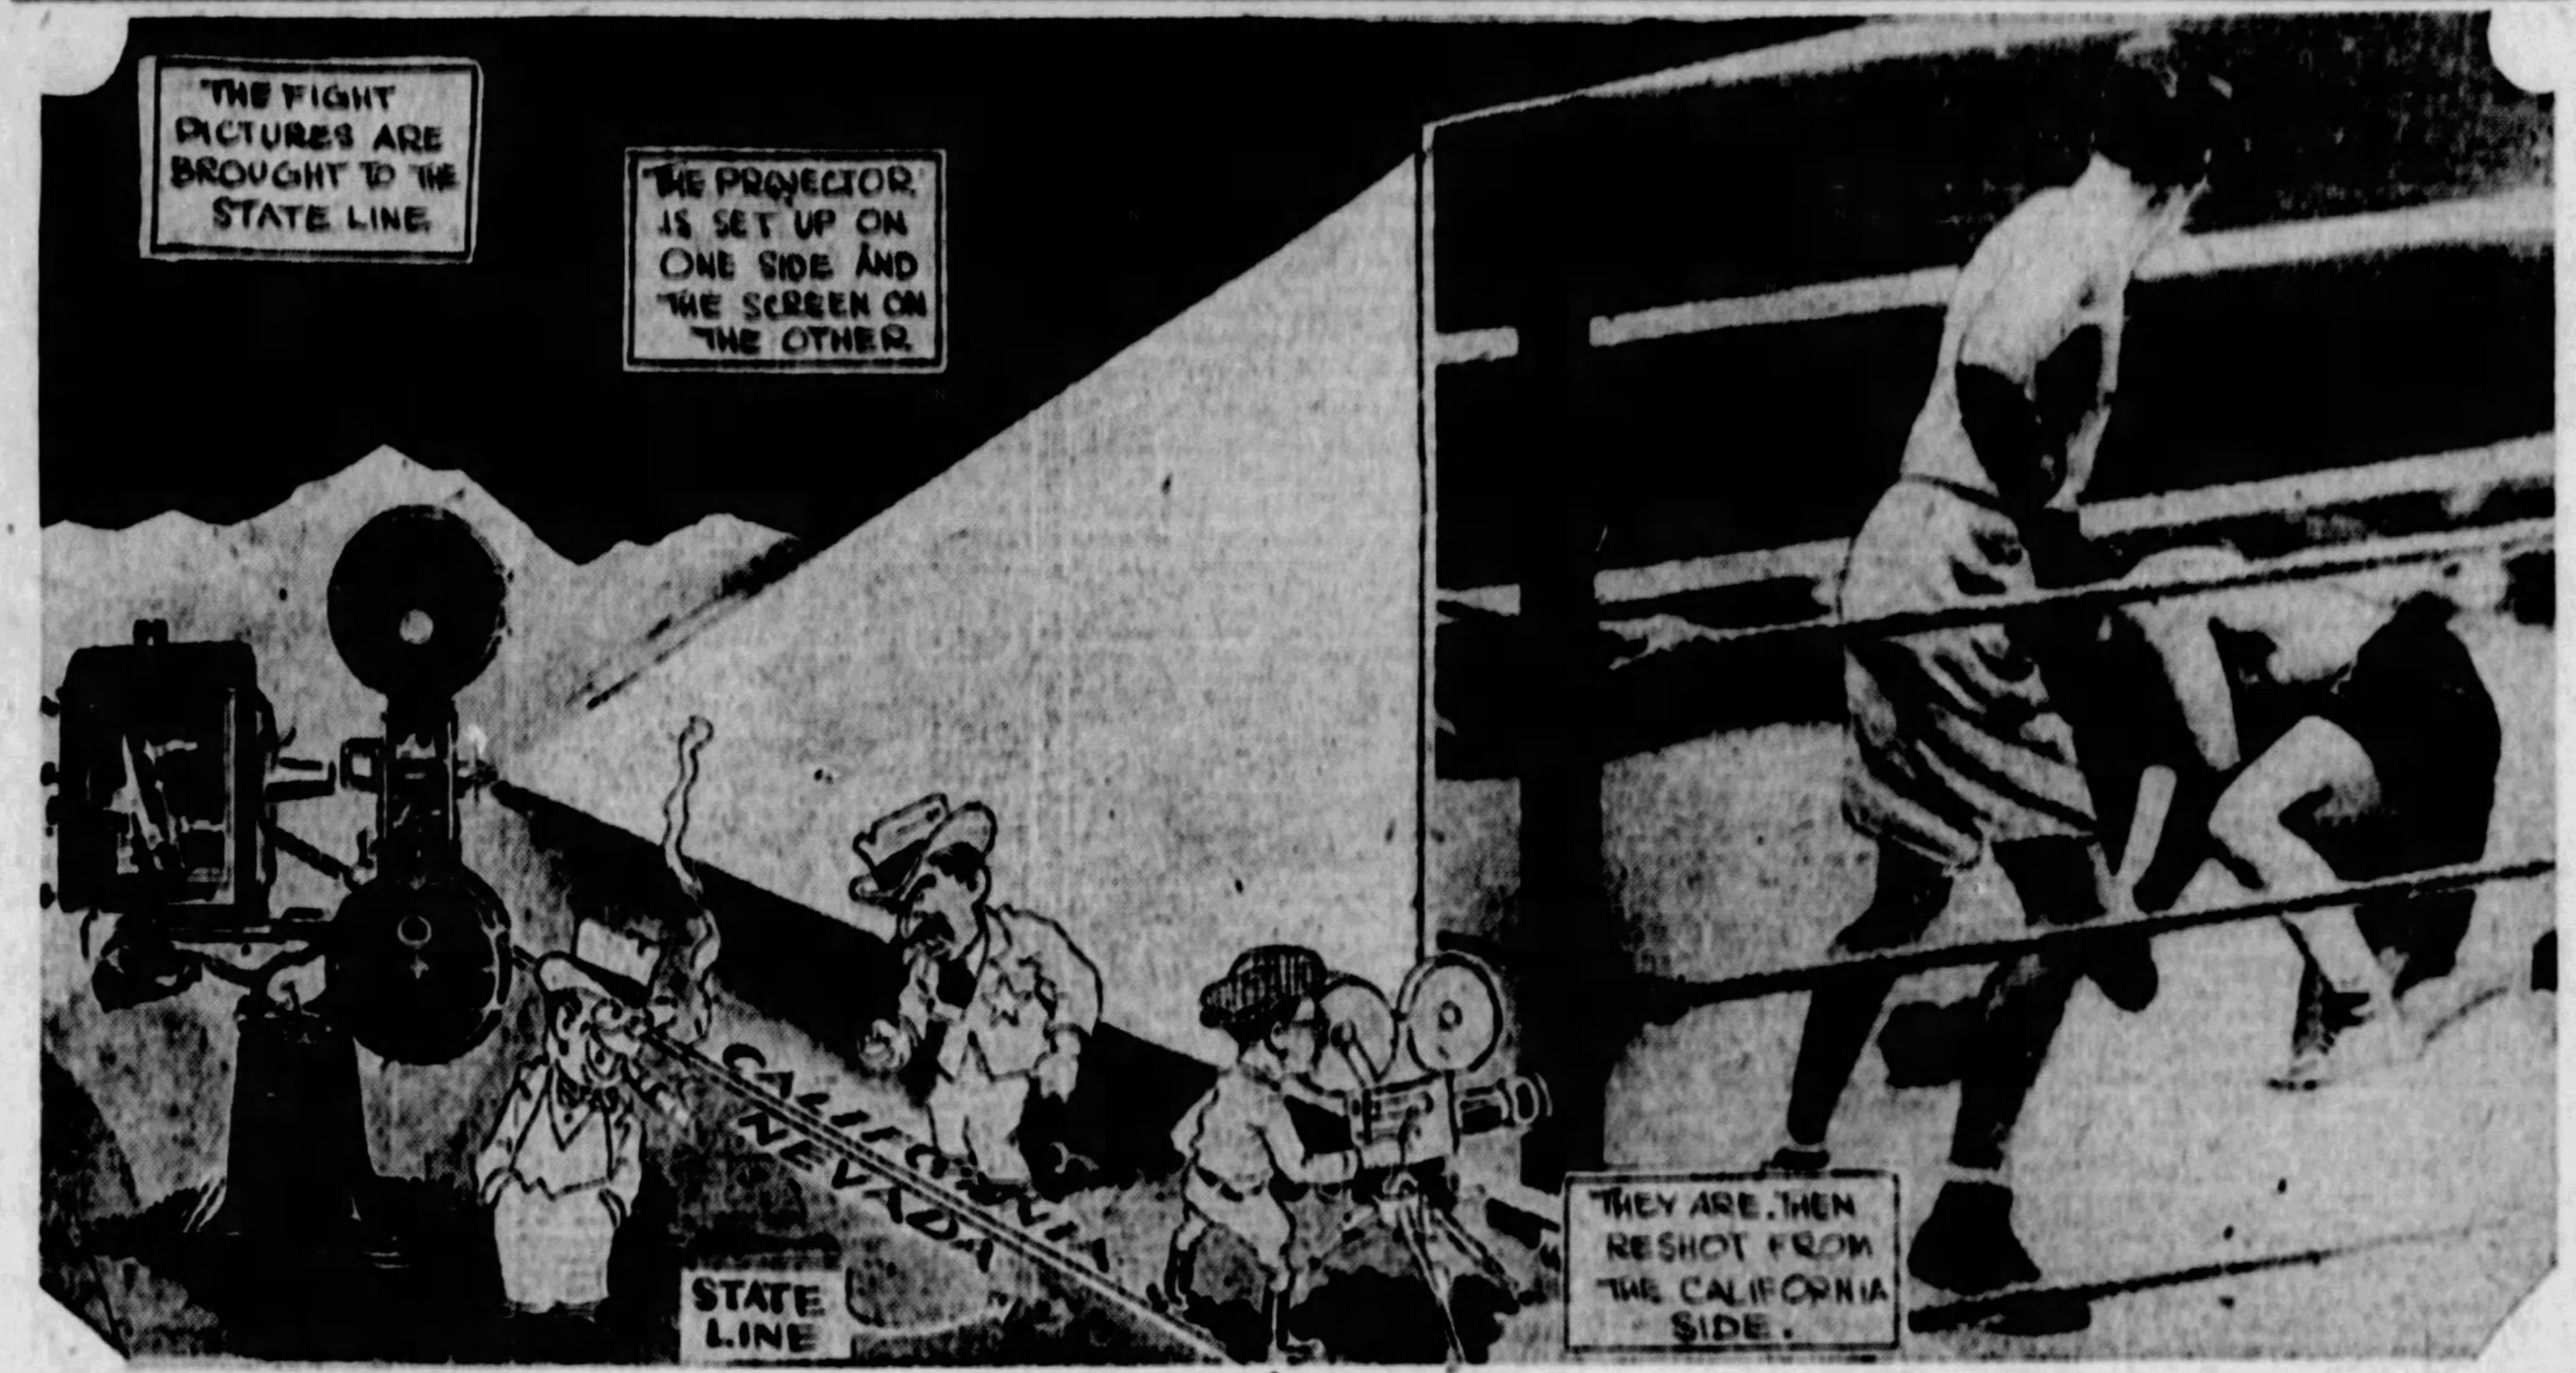
FIGHT FILM -:- EXHIBITORS -:- BEAT THE LAW



THE FIGHT PICTURES ARE BROUGHT TO THE STATE LINE

NEVADA
STATE LINE
THEY ARE THEN RESHOT FROM THE CALIFORNIA SIDE.

Federal laws prohibit transporting fight films from state to state, but there is no law to prevent exhibiting them once they get across, therefore they are being shown in California. This photo explains how fight films are "sent" across state lines without transporting them. A movie projector on one side of the screen and rephotographing camera on the other do the trick by making a duplicate film. Only a beam of light crosses the state line.

Burial Tangle In Carrick Cleared

The legal tangle that developed over the burial of Mrs. Emma Reisfar, 65, of 22 Merritt avenue, who left a farewell note requesting that her husband and daughter have nothing to do with the disposition of her body, was cleared away today when Mrs. Reisfar's executors requested Judge James B. Drew in Common Pleas Court to dismiss a petition they had brought seeking to restrain Albert Reisfar and the daughter, Mrs. H. H. W. Schuchman, from holding funeral services at the Schuchman

Mrs. Reisfar was buried Sunday, and the husband and daughter attended the services. The husband explained that his wife's body was interred, as she had requested, in Allegheny Cemetery. He had, he said, been at her bedside the last 72 hours of her life, although they had previously been estranged.

In accepting the petition on Saturday Judge Joseph M. Swearingen notified the defendants that burial of the body before the expected hearing today would be at their own risk.

OPPOSE CRONIN ASSET SALE

Efforts to sell the assets of Thomas Cronin & Co., contractors, were attacked in Common Pleas Court today when an equity suit was argued before Judge J. M. Swearingen. RED CROSS HERE WANTS 80,000

A quota of 80,000 members to be enrolled Red Cross Sunday, November 13, has been assigned to the Pittsburgh chapter of the American Red Cross by national headquarters, Washington, D. C.

This is the first time membership quotas ever has been given to the chapters by the Red Cross. The 77 disasters in the United States last year to which the national committee contributed so depleted the treasury of the National American Red Cross that, to replenish the treasury so the work of the organization still may be carried on as usual, membership quotas have been given to every chapter in the organization.

Last year the Pittsburgh Chapter secured 70,000 members, so this year 10,000 more than last year must be obtained.

Seeking an escape from New Martinsville's Main street, Helen ran away two weeks ago and went to the home of a girl friend at Imperial, Pa. There she secured an outfit of boy's clothing and set out for the untrammeled life of the open road. A friendly motorist gave her a ride to the Squirrel Hill district here and she was loitering about that section when an inquisitive policeman and a high soprano voice, which ill became her street gamin attire, proved her undoing.

She told Magistrate A. D. Brandon this morning that she was cured and was willing to forsake further adventures for three square meals a day and a bed at night in New Martinsville. She was remanded to the matron's department to await her parents and some feminine apparel.

Oh, Well, It Took the Browns 22 Games to Beat the Yankees

★ SUN-TELEGRAPH ★ SPORTS ★

THROUGH the SPORT LENS

by

HAVEY BOYLE

SOMEONE with a flair for the dramatic came to this writer after the last game of the world series, which the Yankees won in straight sets, as it were, and said:

"Well, Miljus told me tonight that he would have felt better after that pitch to Lazzeri in the ninth inning if someone had come up to him and severed his right arm."

Havey Boyle.

Now Miljus may have or may not have said that, but if you had been present at that game you would be less skeptical of that Miljus quotation.

There have been many dramatic moments in modern sportive history that your correspondent has been a witness of, but that scene in the final world series game, in which there were several prominent actors will remain in memory as long as this particular memory functions.

THREE men on base, no one out, with the world series decision hanging in the balance, with the great Gehrig at the plate—a southpaw batter against a right-handed pitcher—with more than 60,000 fans almost falling out of their chairs in admiration for Miljus and hope for the Yankees—gentlemen, if you were there you might have uttered just a wee little prayer for Miljus.

I KNOW and realize that boys were playing for the money stakes, that baseball is a commercial enterprise, and I have not forgotten these cynicisms voiced about the national pastime, but I defy anyone to control his emotions at the time that Miljus was striking out Gehrig and Meusel in that awful clutch.

HAVING played in my peevish schoolboy days a mediocre brand of poker, and having faced one or two lesser emergencies, which seemed filled with responsibility, I had prided myself on owning an impassive, nonchalant air to the calamity just around the corner, but while Miljus worked on Gehrig and Meusel I puffed a thousand times at my cigaret and the heart was skipping, pounding, skipping.

At the end I figured what had to happen had happened. I tried out a little philosophy. But the countenance fails sometimes. Mr. Dawson, a newspaper acquaintance, after the game said: "You are as white as a ghost."

Now, this report of my own reactions is produced simply to accentuate the reactions of those players who had a far larger hand in the big stake. As the ball got away from Gooch, I watched carefully that climax to the most unusual world series scene that ever has been thrown upon the world series stage.

Yankees shouted and jumped, shook hands; from the Pirate dugout and from the Pirate field there marched a band of gray-clad Pirate players like a silent file of soldiers walking to the firing line.

MILJUS walked slowly as if to keep time with a commanding, yet an inaudible dirge. His cap will not fit his head properly. Strangely that one notices this as one sees the near-hero, the frustrated hero, striding off the field. The cap, one keeps on speculating, lends the impression that someone else adjusted Miljus' cap carelessly and that Miljus never has bothered to aright the cap himself. What thoughts are racing, dancing wildly through that head under that funnily-placed cap?

WHAT tremendous irony the fates had stored up to throw into the phlegmatic face of the Serbian boy who had reached the threshold of lasting fame only to fall down just as the door allowing for entrance was opening? Gehrig and Meusel had been disposed of in almost the only way they could have been disposed of successfully—by the strike out route. But the fellow, Lazzeri, who was at bat when the wild pitch or the passed ball came, was to Miljus a prey as soft as a frightened canary is to a hungry cat.

GEHRIG and Meusel, admittedly, were potent rivals of the strong right arm of Miljus. Here were two big leaguers of great reputation. They had been conquered. Lazzeri, in the mind of Miljus, was some miles away from the class of the two boys who had just succumbed to the strikout pitching of Miljus. In the Coast League where Miljus often had faced Tony Lazzeri the talk was general that all Miljus had to do to put Lazzeri out was to blow ever so gently—puff—as a strong-lunged man would blow at a flickering candle.

THE infielders, Traynor, Wright, Grantham, and Harris, moved back to deep territory, joyfully, after Meusel struck out—and then came the great denoument of the series—a moment which saw the most brilliant pitching of a decade in the tightest pinch go for nothing.

At any rate, the name of Miljus will be linked strongly with great baseball moments. He failed, in the final analysis, but until Gabriel blows his last trumpet to summon all for that big final inning, Miljus in Pittsburgh history will be a name to conjure a great baseball portrait.

Lane Leads All Rivals

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Myles Lane, Dartmouth halfback, took the lead in the race for individual football scoring honors in the East when he rolled up three touchdowns against Allegheny Saturday. Lane's total of 53 points in three games to date is an average of 17 2-3 points a game.

Capt. Roepke, of Penn State, who led a week ago, dropped a bit when he made only one point in his team's unexpected defeat by Bucknell. Jack Connor, of New York University, held his own in third place, and Balderston, of Cornell, shot into second place by making 26 points against Richmond. Booth, Pittsburgh's pile-driving fullback, is in fourth place with a half dozen touchdowns.

By TOM BIRKS

The big surprise of the soccer season was flashed yesterday when the newly formed Mustard Hollow club defeated Heidelberg, national amateur champion, by a 2 to 0 score in the American League at Mustard Hollow.

The boys with the hot name are playing together for the first season, and they are men ripe with experience. The win was not a distinct surprise, for the national champions were far short of the form that led it to be the greatest amateur team in the country last season. Manager Balsarini also fielded the best club to wear the green and gold this season. Joe Fagan was back partnering Vallari, and, incidentally, he was the cause of the first goal.

The first half found nothing scored. Both defenses were too good for the attacking lines, and it was after 57 minutes of play that the first tally came. The home forwards, led by Secane, stormed the Heidelberg goal. Fagan strived to stem the tide and in attempting to clear, kicked back to Courtley. The kick was strong, and before the goalie could prevent it, the ball was in the net.

O'Donnell played a wonderful game for Heidelberg at center forward, leading attack after attack at the Hollow citadel, but Hamilton and Gates were in great form and stopped everything in sight.

With 17 minutes to go, Crompton shot hard and Courtley only partly saved the shot. Harbin tried to clear, but the ball fell over the line. That ended the scoring of the greatest game of the season. The lineup:

Mustard Hollow—2		Heidelberg—0
Gates	G.	Courtley
Miller	R. B.	Vallari
Hamilton	L. B.	Fagan
Bigi	R. H.	Snaudy
Sickles	C. H.	Harbin
Sweetbark	O. R.	Chapple
W. Secane	I. R.	Donzelli
D. Secane	C.	O'Donnell
Aitkin	I. L.	McCosky
Crompton	O. L.	Bregg

Goal scores—Fagan (through own goal); Crompton. Score at half time—0-0. Time of halves—two 45 minutes. Referee—Donegray.

Keeping up their wonderful form the Corinthians defeated the German Sport Club yesterday at Cooley field and upset the dope. The Germans are playing good soccer, but the Corinthians are going to make them all step to collect points in that league.

It seems as though Buff Donnelli will have to start shooting in Heidelberg's front line to give it some driving power. Bill O'Donnell and Johnny McCosky played some pretty football, but the scoring power will have to be shown.

Bigi, playing halfback on Mustard is one of the most improved players in the district. He seems to be able to break up all the movements of the opposition, and few goals are going to be scored from his wing.

Westinghouse is going to be the real threat in the International circuit this season. Fans feel that National Tube will have a walkaway, but the Valley club is collecting points. Douglas was yesterday's victim by a 5-to-1 score.

The cup ties are with us this week. Heidelberg at Harmarville Whippets. That seems to be the piece de resistance of the week. Will the National champions receive another setback? We hardly think so. It is in the cup ties that the Green and Gold Tornado seems to do its best work.

Another Welch Breaks Loose At Purdue

LAFAYETTE, IND., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—A new football star has burst into first magnitude in the Western Conference heavens, specifically in the constellation Purdue.

Ray Welch is the name, a young unknown who played his first 'varsity game when his team faced Harvard at Cambridge, Mass., Saturday and won, 19-0. His performance was looked upon as remarkable, particularly because he took the place of Capt. "Cotton" Wilcox, one of the Middlewest's best backs.

The substitute halfback ran wild through the Crimson tacklers, smashed gaping holes in Harvard's forward wall, tossed several forward passes, including one for 40 yards, that led to a touchdown, and drove across the Easterners' goal for two of the three touchdowns made by Purdue.

As a sideline he did most of the Hoosier team's booting, and was credited with outpunting Harvard's kicker consistently throughout the game.

Welch, whose home is at Whiteboro, Tex., entered Purdue last year, and played on the freshman team. Until Wilcox was hurt in the first game of this season, Welch had not been considered regular backfield timber.

DELANEY BOXES RENAULT FRIDAY

By MURRAY LEWIN,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Whether or not Jack Delaney, former light heavyweight champion, is wisely masquerading as a heavyweight may be determined Friday night when he squares off against Jack Renault, the 200-pound Canadian veteran, in a scheduled 10-round rumpus at the Garden.

Since handing over his title several months ago to play with the big boys, Delaney has ceased to be the wow he was at 175 pounds. His batting average in two starts is a mere .500. He scored on a foul over Paulino Uzcudun, the bounding Basque, and then dropped a decision to Johnny Risko, whom he had previously beaten.

Unless Delaney can turn in a more favorable performance against the slow-moving Canadian, he would do well to return to his former class. For Renault is in the has-been class, judging by his recent brush with Arthur DeKuh. If Delaney hasn't enough stuff to lick him, he shouldn't be allowed to mingle with any of the other big 'uns.

TEX TO STAGE TOURNEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Preliminary details have been arranged for a heavyweight elimination battle between Phil Scott, English champion, and Paulino Uzcudun. Tex Rickard has chosen two dates for the contest, November 4 or November 14, and it will be held in Madison Square Garden.

Before leaving for a three-weeks' vacation in Hot Springs, Ark., Rickard said that he had contracted for Paulino's exclusive services, and that he had either bound or arranged to bind every first-class heavyweight in the country for services in his tournament. Jack Sharkey and Tom Heeney are to meet in one of the bouts November 18.

The first card in the tournament comes next Friday night, when Jack Delaney meets Jack Renault.

DAN HEEPS CLUB DEFEATS CLEVELAND AMATEURS, 5-4

BUSCH, COAST-TO-COAST RUNNER, AT KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 10.—William H. Busch, former Pittsburgher, now of Boston, left here yesterday morning for St. Louis in his effort to break the coast-to-coast marathon record.

Busch left Los Angeles 40 days ago and has covered approximately 2,000 miles. His destination is New York City.

Yale to Change Lineup

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 10.—Several changes in the Yale eleven may be made before the Brown game next Saturday. Hoben, quarterback, is not likely to be used at that position again. Hall, sophomore, may draw the field, general's post. Changes also are expected at center and halfback.

Deserved Win Huggins Says

By BILL SLOCUM,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Miller Huggins told newspapermen in the Yankee club house, within a few minutes after his club had won the highest honors in baseball, that they should not be too critical of Donie Bush or the Pirates.

"I think all will agree that my players deserved to win," said the Yankee manager, "but don't forget that the Pirates are a stronger ball club than they showed themselves in this series."

In a nearby room, where Bush and his Pirates were doing their best to shake off both baseball regalia and disappointment, Donie Bush remarked:

"The Yankees won on their merits. They outplayed us and defeated us fairly. The better ball club won and we have no alibis to offer."

Two refreshing statements which tell much about the world series of 1927. The American League champions were the better ball club and figured to defeat any club which might win the National League pennant this season. The Pirates, who qualified as opponents, were not as strong a ball club as Miller Huggins led to easy victory in the season's play, but the Pirates are better than four straight losses might lead one to believe.

Neither club approached its hitting form of the regular season, but the Yankees were much nearer their normal than were the Pirates.

Looking over the statistics and then tossing the figures gently away it can be said that the American League champions outbatted, outscored, outslugged, outfielded, outwalked and outran their National League opponents.

From the time that Remy Kremer threw the first ball to Combs at Pittsburgh last Wednesday until Miljus made his wild pitch in Saturday's game, the Yankees trailed in exactly two innings. The core stood 1 to 0 against the Hugmen at the end of the first and second innings of the second game. At no other time over a stretch of 36 innings did Pittsburgh kick any dust on the Yankees.

One glaring defect in the Pittsburgh machine was the lack of capable left-hand pitching. It has been proved through the most successful season that any club enjoyed in years that the top section of the Yankee batting order is poison to right-handers. Combs, Koenig, Ruth and Gehrig all hit from the left-hand side in that order and the right-handers which Bush tossed against them found the grade too steep.

Series Over, Yank Players Leave For Winter

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—With the world series completed the Yanks are hurriedly making arrangements to depart from the city. Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig will tour the provinces, playing exhibition games. Their trip will take them as far as the coast. The stars will play against each other. Joe Dugan and Tony Lazzeri also have permission from Commissioner Landis to play exhibition games.

Mark Koenig and the veteran Bob Shawkey are going to Canada on a hunting trip. Waite Hoyt is also going to make a trip to Canada. The other players are rushing back to their respective homes to await the postman who will bring the letter from Landis' Chicago office that will contain their share of the series spoils.

Skipper Huggins is going upstate to enjoy a vacation of three or four weeks. Then he will go back to St. Petersburg, Fla., until the winter meetings.

CUYLER TELLS HOW TROUBLE BEGAN

ON WAY TO ALL-AMERICA FAME

AND A TOUCHDOWN 105 YARDS AWAY!

GIBBY WELCH

Pitt football captain, who attracted national attention to himself by his feat of running back a kickoff 105 yards for a touchdown in the game with West Virginia in the Pitt Stadium last Saturday. Gibby has been one of the outstanding halfbacks of the country for a couple of seasons and should be at his best in this, his last, campaign. Barring injuries, he figures to be one of the leading contenders for all-America honors by the time Thanksgiving rolls around.

that two-hole." In putting me in the second notch I know Bush felt he was doing the right thing.

Now the only other thing I am generally supposed to have kicked about is playing left field. I never "kicked" about it at all. I mentioned my position in the field but once to my boss. Then I was not demanding it—I merely suggested that left leld was my worst spot in the outfield, which I know is true.

Bush and I did not quarrel over that left field suggestion. When he explained to me that I was to play left because he thought my good friend, Lloyd Waner, was better in center than he was in left, I dropped the matter for all time.

Prior to my being fined there was just one other conflict between Bush and myself. Bush blamed me for getting caught off third in a Giant game in the Polo Grounds. I was doubled on a line hit to Jackson, who whipped the ball to Lindstrom to double me off.

I was playing off too far, but I played off too far because Bush had insisted, against my advice, that I take a couple of extra steps from the bag in playing off.

When Bush took me to task about getting caught off third I believed he was wrong in doing this. I don'' say it was his fault I got caught off third; maybe it wasn't anybody's fault. But certainly I don't believe I should have been "panned" because I had followed instructions.

All these things led up to the $50 fine—and what proved to be almost complete suspension as a Pirate—which came when I failed to slide in the much-discussed play of that Giant game at Forbes Field. I did not slide because I did not figure it was my place to slide. I went in standing up because I wanted to prevent Jackson, Giant shortstop, from making the throw to first base to complete the double play. Jackson dropped the ball, I over-ran second, and was tagged out. If Jackson had held the ball I would have been right. It was not my fault he did not hold the ball. In

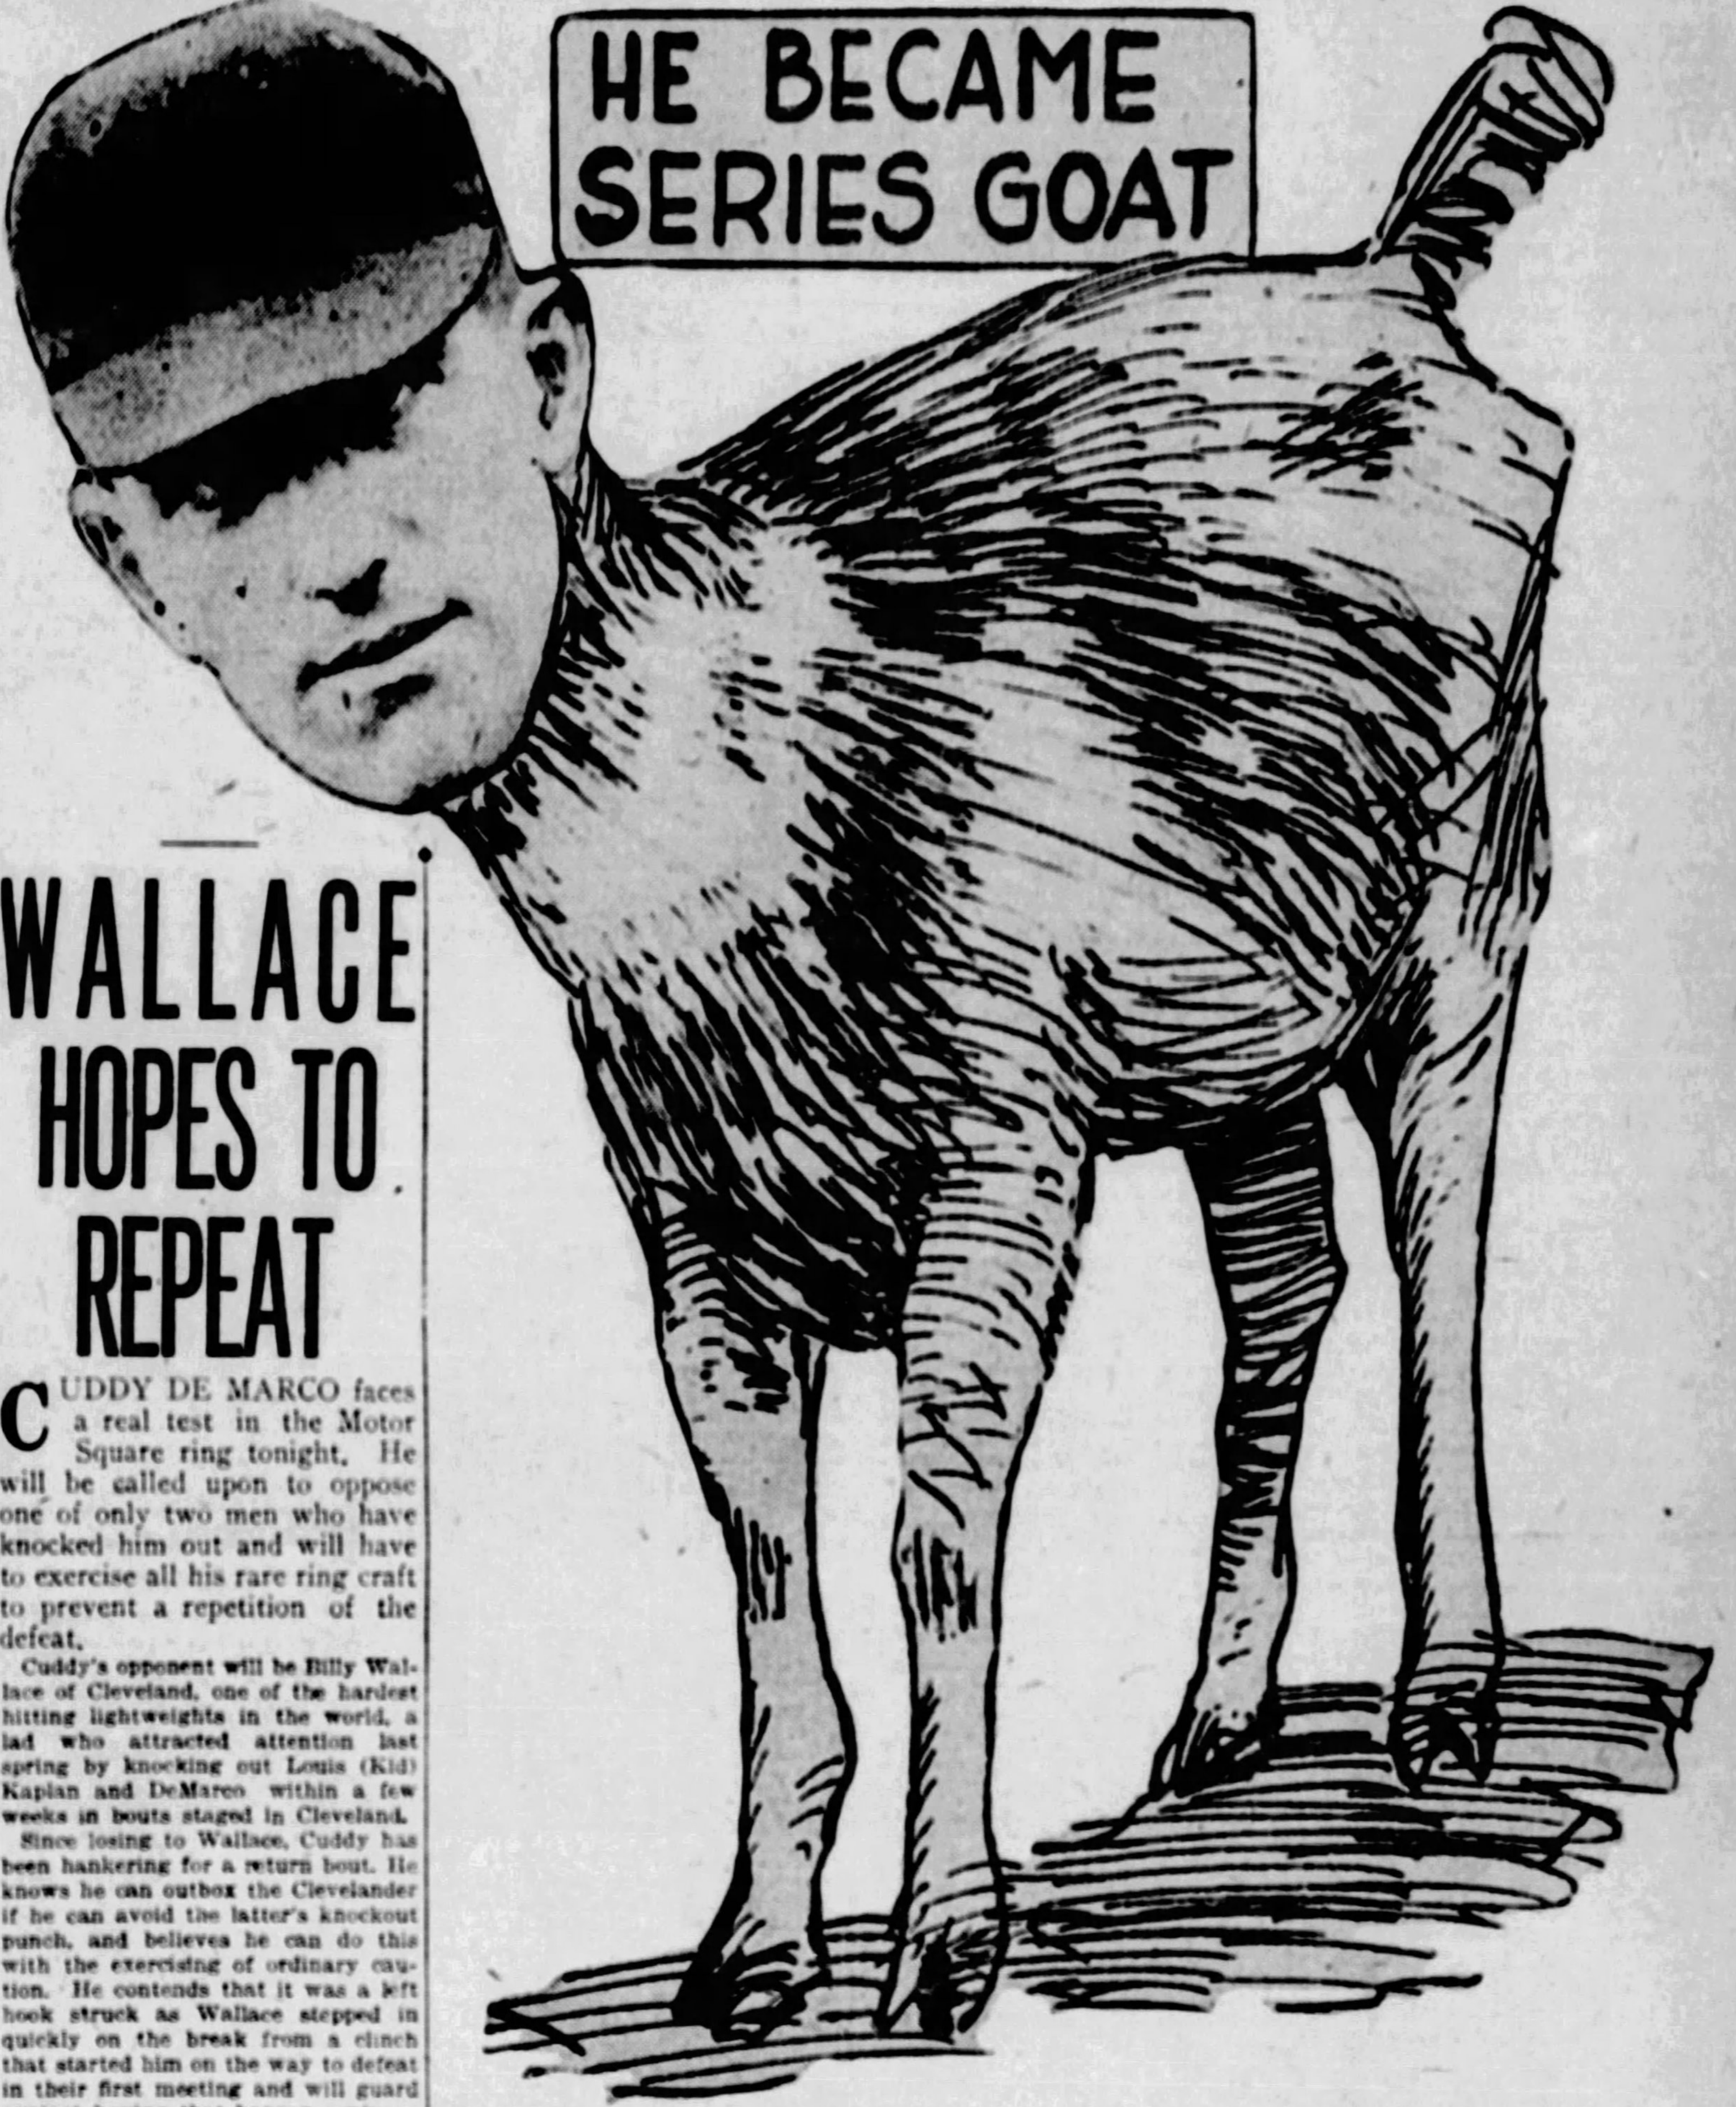
DE MARCO MEETS KNOCKEROUT AT MOTOR SQUARE TONIGHT

ALMOST A HERO, BUT—



JOHN MILJUS (Artist's Impression)

Pirate pitcher, who was the hero of the locals in defeat in the opening game of the world series, when he relieved Kremer, and again did heroic mound work in the finale, Saturday, up to the time he made a doubtful wild pitch with the bases full in the ninth and permitted the deciding run of the series to score. There's a short drop between being a hero and a goat, after all. If Miljus had succeeded in fanning the side with the sacks loaded and the deciding run hanging in the balance, it would have been one of the outstanding pitching feats of world series history, and he already had set down Gehrig and Meusel on strikes and was on the way to making Lazzeri fan when the woozy heave cropped out.

WALLACE HOPES TO REPEAT

CUDDY DE MARCO faces a real test in the Motor Square ring tonight. He will be called upon to oppose one of only two men who have knocked him out and will have to exercise all his rare ring craft to prevent a repetition of the defeat.

Cuddy's opponent will be Billy Wallace of Cleveland, one of the hardest hitting lightweights in the world, a lad who attracted attention last spring by knocking out Louis (Kid) Kaplan and DeMarco within a few weeks in bouts staged in Cleveland.

Since losing to Wallace, Cuddy has been hankering for a return bout. He knows he can outbox the Clevelander if he can avoid the latter's knockout punch, and believes he can do this with the exercising of ordinary caution. He contends that it was a left hook struck as Wallace stepped in quickly on the break from a clinch that started him on the way to defeat in their first meeting and will guard against having that happen again.

Wallace arrived in the city yesterday and declared he was on edge and confident he would win by a knockout once more. DeMarco was just as confident he would turn the tables.

Jackie Brady, the only other boxer ever to stop DeMarco, fought him in a return bout at Motor Square Garden last season and repeated his victory, but not by a knockout. DeMarco was gun-shy that night and refused to take any chances, with the result that Brady handily pounded his way to a second triumph. In view of this, it will be interesting to note how Cuddy performs against his second conqueror tonight.

CEDER IN SEMI-FINAL

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

THERE are more ways than one of becoming a world series hero, and even though Catcher Johnny Gooch of the Pirates did nothing particularly brilliant behind the plate or at bat during the 1927 series of painful memory, he earned for himself a place among the biggest and most sportsmanlike men the game ever produced when he insisted upon taking all the blame for the foozle that gave the Yankees the winning run in the fourth and final game.

Many a catcher would have alibied under similar circumstances, would have made immediate and anxious inquiries as to which member of the battery pair had been charged with the slip, and would have rejoiced inwardly upon learning that the bobble had been scored as a wild pitch and an error for the pitcher.

BUT Gooch isn't built that way, and in insisting that it was not a wild pitch, but a passed ball, and that he alone was to blame, begging that the scoring be changed, he made himself just as great a series hero—at least in such matters as character, whiteness and unselfishness—as any of the stars of the past who were placed on pedestals because of some outstanding batting or fielding or pitching feat that had much

PITT STAR SURE OF FAME

By JESS CARVER.

PITTSBURGH stirred from the humble concealment of its sack cloth and ashes, into which it went after the socking our Pirates took in the world series, to give vent to vociferous cheering over the ascendancy to national prominence of Gibby Welch, captain of the Pitt varsity football team and one of the greatest halfbacks of all time.

There, boys, was a crack that will cause the fur to fly and much midnight oil to be burned in letter writing of indignation. Folks will be recalling the Casey's, the Grange's, the Buell's, the Davies' and a host of other great halfbacks, and stacking 'em up against Welch. Just try it, and you will find many points in which Welch will EXCEL.

Gibby Welch played a great game Saturday while his Golden Panthers were annihaliating West Virginia by a 40-0 score. He dashed 106 yards for a touchdown on a kickoff, and delivered the punch that knocked Ira Hodgers silly. He caried the ball a total of 176 yards in 16 attempts. By doing so, he gained more ground by 10 yards than the entire West Virginia team.

He passed, tossing six heaves, com-

PIRATE HEADS DENY CLUB TO BE SOLD

All of the officials of the Pittsburgh baseball club today repeated very emphatically their denials of the report that the club had been or was about to be sold.

The rumor arose from the coming to Pittsburgh last week of Lew Wentz, former Pittsburgher and now wealthy oil operator of Tulsa, Okla. Wentz came here with Fred Clarke, the former Pirate manager, to see the series games, and on Saturday it was reported that he had closed a deal for the purchase of the Pirates.

OFFICIAL DENIAL

The report was denied by President Barney Dreyfuss and Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgh club, at the time, but today it broke out afresh, and it was persistently rumored in both baseball and business circles that the deal had gone through and that the ownership of the Buccaneers had changed hands.

However, the officials of the club were even more emphatic in their

Federal Authorities To Examine Film Suspects

Sime Silverman, editor of Variety, will be among those questioned. P. Bosewick of the Slocum Film Corporation is said to admit he purchased the pictures from P. Wasserman. The latter could not be located by the Federal authorities.

Babe Ruth Boosts Series Batting Average to .275

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth's batting mark of .400 for the 1927 world series, including nine record performances, boosted his all-time series mark to .275 from .253. The Babe has figured in eight championship conflicts altogether, but it has only been in his last three that he has successfully lived down his earlier days as a series "bust."

The Bambino did not begin to figure as a regular in the baseball classic until he joined the Yankees, serving only as a pinch hitter or pitcher with the Red Sox in his first three title tests.

Better Team Won

By HARRY KECK, Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

IF ANYBODY looked worse than the Pirates in losing four straight games to the New York Yankees in the world series of recent and bitter memory, it was those scribes who thought the Pittsburghers had a chance to win and wrote their thoughts down on clean, white paper and then had them transferred into print.

Of which yours truly was one. In past world series, the Yankees have had a habit of looking pretty bad themselves. This year, of all years, they had to be at their best with the Pirates at their worst.

There is no need to alibi or try to alibi the Pirates' clean sweep setback. The Yankees deserved to win through the medium of better pitching and better all-round play. The Pirates staggered throughout the four games. In only the last battle were they playing the heads-up ball of which they are capable, and then, as in the other games, the breaks went against them, a wild pitch sending home the deciding run for the first time in world series history. The better team, on the strength of its playing in the series, won, and deserves full credit for its success. The Yankees did not hammer Pirate pitchers as viciously as it was feared they might, and the Corsair pitchers can take some consolation from this fact. However, the Yankee pitchers were even better, and this, combined with the American League team's more aggressive play and the breaks that came its way, decided the issue in decisive fashion.

Now It Can Be Told

FREQUENTLY during the fag end of the National League race, when the Pirates were struggling for the pennant, the fans demanded of the local newspapers that they "tell the truth about Cuyler." Because the Pirates at that time needed all the support it was possible to give them, the Sun-Telegraph declined to go into the matter deeply. Now, however, with the season and world series out of PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Wyoming Warner, former Western football star, who has scored nine knockouts in seven professional fights, five of them in the first round, pits his punch and inexperience against a former world's champion at the Arena here tonight. He boxes Pete Latzo, erstwhile welterweight champion and now a middleweight, in the windup bout.

Bush Lauds Champions

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Regardless of how much the Pirates contributed to the decisive world series victory of the Yankees, the result strengthened the claims of those experts who class the American League champions among the greatest teams of all times.

Even so staunch a National Leaguer as Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn Robins, said before the series that he rated the Yankees a few notches above the famous old Baltimore Orioles or any other team in baseball history. Uncle Wilbert was considered to have become a bit excited, biased perhaps by the way the Yankees had treated his own outfit in spring exhibitions, but the close of the series now finds most of the previously reluctant critics going over to Robinson's point of view.

GREATEST SERIES CLUB

In Donie Bush's opinion, the Yankees are at least the best club that has represented either league in the world series since the war.

The big issue, among American League teams looking toward next season, is: How can the Yankees be stopped?

They ran away with the race this year. The outcome virtually was assured in June and at the finish the Yankees had the overwhelming margin of 19 games over the second-place Athletics, who had been picked beforehand by a majority of experts to win the pennant.

The Athletics had some hard luck, perhaps, but their veteran pilot freely admitted late in the season that not even the benefit of all the breaks would have enabled his club to beat out the Yankees.

"I don't intend to give up trying to beat them," Connie remarked. "We will strengthen our club for 1928. I have a great pitching staff and am banking heavily on it. Our club showed almost as much hitting power as the Yankees, even though not of the long distance variety. We hope to make it close, anyway, next year."

Next year will be Mack's twenty-eighth at the helm of the Athletics, but he has no idea of quitting the game.

YANKS HAVE EVERYTHING

The Yankees, baseball men agree, have everything and look as capable as any club ever has of prolonging its stay at the peak. It is the ambition of Miller Huggins, diminutive manager, and the club owner, Col. Jacob Ruppert, to equal or surpass the record of the Giants of capturing four successive pennants.

Huggins has built up a brilliant combination of youth and experience. The three kid infielders—Koenig, Lazzeri and Gehrig—who gained regular posts last year, have developed into as great a trio as any in either league. Gehrig has come along in sensational fashion at bat. He gave Ruth a hot race most of the season for home run honors and may do even better next year.

Joe Dugan, the veteran at third, may not last much longer, although he was up to his best defensive form in the world series.

Ruth, a marvelous athlete, at 32 has had one of his greatest seasons, breaking his own home run record with a mark of 60, one more than he registered in 1921, when he was a youthful 27. Bob Meusel, another durable veteran, and Earl Combs, a brilliant youngster just reaching his prime, round out a great outfield.

denials this morning. "There is absolutely no truth in the report, and there never was the slightest foundation for it," said President Barney Dreyfuss. "The Pittsburgh club has not been sold to Mr. Wentz or to any other person. Mr. Wentz has made no offer for the club since the occasions several years ago, when he expressed a desire to purchase control but his advances were declined. No offer for the club has been made by any other person or persons, and there are no negotiations pending or in prospect with any one."

Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss repeated his denial of Saturday night, which was published in The Sun-Telegraph yesterday. "The club has not been sold; no offers have been received for it and no negotiations have been opened or proposed."

"Will the club be sold later," he was asked.

"Well, of course, it would be impossible for me to answer that at this time. Any one probably would sell almost anything he owned if he were offered a large enough price for it. But you may say positively now that the club has not been sold and that no negotiations are on for such a sale."

NOTHING TO IT—WATTERS

Secretary S. E. Watters added his denial. "There is absolutely no truth in the rumor," he said, "and I know that no sale is being even contemplated."

President Dreyfuss, Treasurer Dreyfuss, Secretary Watters and Manager Owen Bush said they had no comment to make on the Cuyler case, nor on the first installment of "Cuyler's Own Story," written by the player himself, which appears in the Sun-Telegraph today.

Fans believe that the club management may have something to say as to their side of the case later, the general impression being that they would naturally prefer to say nothing at this time because of the possibility that any criticism of Cuyler at present might lessen his trading value when the time comes for making the anticipated deal for the transfer of the outfielder to some other club.

the same game I was caught dashing to third on an overthrow to first. That was a bad play, I admit. I made a mistake in calculation. But a fellow can't be accused of loafing if he is trying to make an extra base. The papers came out and said I was fined $50 for loafing.

When Bush told me I was fined I started to explain my side. It was in the clubhouse. He was naturally hot and he told me he wanted to hear no alibi. I told him I just wanted to tell him what I thought of the play.

Now was I a loafing, stubborn, insubordinate ball player for all of this? Well, anyway there was no one more anxious to play and to help the club win. A few days after the fine I was advised by a friend in St. Louis to act like a good soldier, to be a good sport, and to go to Bush to apologize. This I did in St. Louis.

"If I've done anything wrong," I said to the Pirate manager, "I want to apologize for it. I am sorry."

Bush replied: "I have nothing personal against you. You're too good of a fellow for me to hold anything personal against you."

I then entertained a hope I would get another chance to get in there and do my best, but the chance, barring a very few turns, never came. I believe Bush when he says he has nothing personal against me. I am truthful in saying I have nothing personal against him, although sometimes sitting on the bench I wondered if I had banishment coming to me on my record.

One must make allowances, of course, for the nervous strain a manager is under when things are going bad with a pennant-contender. Yet one must consider, too, certain feelings every man has. I believe I was most bitter—not when a new man was put into the outfield after my friend and excellent player, Barnhart, got hurt; not when I saw chances where I might have helped cases where other men were used—but on one day toward the close of the season when, while I was sitting in the dugout—in the open part and not on the bench—Bush came to me and said harshly:

"Get in out of here. Get on the bench. Your friends all know you are here." A friend of mine had spoken to me from the stands and I had waved back to him. Bush's insinuation that I was out there to stir up my friends was entirely wrong.

That hurt me more than anything else. Bush had falsely accused me, but knowing how bad I was "in" with the club I obeyed that order, too.

the way, the truth can be told, and the Sun-Telegraph is telling it, in the form of Cuyler's own story, beginning in these columns today. Read it for the only authoritative information on what happened behind the scenes.

The dogs days of sport are here, with the world series out of the way and nothing but football, basketball, hockey, bowling, billiards, boxing and a dozen or so other diversions to turn to. In other words, there's nothing to do now but keep going until the baseball clubs go South and West again in the spring.

Pitt in for Big Season

THE University of Pittsburgh has one of its greatest seasons under way. Not since the early years of Pop Warner's regime here have the Panthers shown so much early-season power as they have to date this season. The 40-0 defeat of West Virginia University last Saturday was the tip-off on just how good Coach Jock Sutherland's proteges are. After several seasons of experimenting, one of the real stars of the great 1916 Pitt outfit finally has been able to turn out a machine that promises to duplicate the steam-roller record of the aggregation on which he himself played.

Yale and Harvard took their bumps Saturday from Georgia and Purdue, respectively, while Princeton escaped unscathed against Lehigh. There was a time when such defeats for two members of the Big Three would have caused a great deal of commotion, but those days are gone now, gone forever. There are too many good teams in the land for the Big Two, or the erstwhile Big Three, to monopolize the attention of the fans.

BAND ON STRIKE; TEAM LOSES MUSIC

MARTINS FERRY, O., Oct. 10.—The Martins Ferry High School football team will have no music to inspire them to feats of glory on the gridiron because the school's 125-piece band has gone on a strike.

The authorities demanded that the student musicians practice outside of school hours because of interference with other organizations and with studies.

to do with the outcome of a title series.

Bigger things may have been done off the field in baseball at some time or other than Gooch's plea that the blame for the loss of his team's last chance in a world series, but none comes to mind very readily.

MILJUS himself was just as unselfish as Gooch in the matter, insisted that he should be charged with a wild pitch and that the scoring was correct.

Reports of what took place in the Pirate clubhouse after the game show that there is a third person who deserves a heap of credit for the fair and white manner in which he handled the situation. That person is Manager Donie Bush. The little skipper who piloted the Pittsburgh club to its sixth pennant in the city's 41 years of National League membership is not the kind who alibis or who rebukes his players for errors of ommision that are made in honest attempts.

DONIE always takes the stand that errors are part of baseball and that such slips as caused the loss of Saturday's game are merely unfortunate occurrences that cannot be avoided in the sport.

Here is the fair and tactful manner in which Manager Donie Bush settled the matter in the presence of all the Pittsburgh players in the clubhouse: Calling Miljus and Gooch together before all the other players, he said: "Now let us get this all cleared up." Turning to Miljus, he said: "Johnny, that was a poorly pitched ball." Then turning to Gooch, he added: "But you, Johnny, have caught many a worse pitch. So we'll call it a draw and forget all about it."

QUERIES have been received as to whether Carmen Hill established a world series record by striking out three men in one inning in Saturday's game. As a matter of fact, he got only half-way toward the record, which is six successive strikeouts in two innings.

This high mark was established by Hod Eller, the "shine ball" artist of the Cincinnati club, against the Chicago Americans in 1919. The fewer times that series is mentioned in honest baseball circles, the better for the game in general, perhaps, but anyhow Eller hung up the record for successive strikeouts that fall.

In the fifth game of the series, played in Chicago on October 6, Eller fanned Chick Gandil, Swede Risberg and Ray Schalk in a row in the third inning, and in the fourth he whiffed Claude Williams, Nemo Leibold and Eddie Collins.

Buck Weaver, the first man up in the fifth, evidently feared being the seventh straight victim of the "shine ball," as he bunted the ball to Eller as the safest means of breaking his string of whiffs. Eller struck out nine men during the game and won easily, 5 to 0.

"THE Yankees won, and we've got to give them all the credit in the world, but they certainly did not beat the real Pittsburgh team," said Scout Bob Tarleton of the Pirates. "That final pennant drive seemingly sapped the strength of our boys, and they did not look like the same team in the series."

Bob will leave in a short time to spend the winter in Galveston, Tex. He is still confident that the Pirates will find they have picked up a real pitcher in Fred Fussell, former Cub star of the Texas League and the Dixie series this year, who was bought by the Pittsburgh club from Wichita Falls on his recommendation, and looks for the southpaw to make a fine impression on the Buc training trip next spring.

THERE will be a scattering of the Pirates in all directions this week, following today's meeting to act on how the Bucs' share of the world series spoils is to be divided, but those who are not required to start for their homes immediately will remain to attend a banquet to be given to the team by President Barney Dreyfuss at the Westmoreland Country Club Saturday night as a mark of his appreciation of their success in bringing to Pittsburgh the sixth pennant won in the city's 41 years of membership in the National League.

son in that ring in the semi-final against Harry Harris of Niles, O. Rudy has scored two knockouts within the past week, at Ebensburg and Erie, and is after his third straight.

Teddy Welch of McKeesport and Young Rudy of Charleroi, will do the honors again in the second bout, and two Negro heavies, Kid Crutchfield and Sam Hunter, both of the Hill, will mix in the opening event.

All four bouts are scheduled for eight rounds, the first going on at 8:30.

Nick Susnell, Rochester, Pa., welterweight, boxes Jackie Herman in the main bout of a show of six-rounders at Wheeling tonight.

Sandy Seifert, North Side heavyweight, winds up his training today for his bout with Emmett Rocco, sensational young heavyweight of Ellwood City, at Youngstown, tomorrow night. Rocco has stopped Joe Burke, Quintin Romero-Rojas and Sailor Maxted, among others.

RUDY VS. TAYLOR AGAIN

Young Rudy, the Charleroi youngster, who is becoming one of the prime favorites with the fans of Western Pennsylvanias, makes his second start of the week Thursday night, when he opposes Harry Taylor of the North Side, in the main event at McKeesport. It will be their third meeting. Bobby Richardson of Portage, Pa., and Teddy Esterbrook, middleweight of Niles, O., will clash in the other 10-round bout of the double windup card.

A letter awaits Sandy Seifert at this office.

KATKISH TO BOX IN EAST

Joey Katkish, Lawrenceville bantamweight, leaves tomorrow night for New York on his way to Worcester, Mass., where he boxes Tony Mandell in the 10-round main bout Friday night. Following the bout he will return to New York, where he will make his headquarters for the present.

Bobby Richardson boxes Cowboy Padgett of Oklahoma in the main event of the opening show of the indoor season at Cumberland, Md., next Monday night.

"I agree with George White that Luckies are the best"

"In the theatre world, Luckies have become almost universal. Stage folks are very critical—voices must be kept in condition, throat irritation is a handicap. In 'George White's Scandals,' most actors and actresses whose voices are important smoke Luckies both for voice protection and finer flavor. For these reasons I prefer them, too."

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

"SURE, I think we could have taken Tony if I had not got that ball out too far for Johnny," said Miljus in a regretful manner as he discussed the dramatic ninth inning of the last world series game Saturday in the Yankee Stadium.

"Why I could sneeze and get Tony out when we were in the Coast League," exclaimed Miljus with a smile. John thinks Lazzeri is a crackerjack ball player and fighter who could fit in on any championship club, but the Penn avenue star had just the kind of a ball to fool the scrappy Italian.

MILJUS went on to relate that the pitch that let in the winning run was a side-arm hook. Dark John has a beautiful assortment of offerings including overhand and side-arm deliveries and he was mixing up his stuff when the little slip injured. The good-natured soldier-athlete, emulating Gooch, wishes to take the blame for the pitch.

THE Pirates arrived in town yesterday morning, in good spirits considering the loss of the titular event. The general feeling among the Pirate club is that the Yankees are worthy champions, but every mother's son on the Pittsburgh team thinks that they could take the measure of the Yanks at least as often as the verdict would be reversed if the two clubs played 22 games—the usual number engaged in by the various teams in the championship season.

THE series seems to have been lost, to a large extent, in the first battle at Forbes Field. Stupid baseball on the part of the Pirates stood out in this encounter, yet they actually had the winning run on the bases in the eighth inning. Remove blunder stuff from the opener and there would have been a different story of that contest at least.

TO make matters tougher for the Buccos, after their dull display in the opener, they actually were victimized by the breaks of the game. Any baseball authority will admit that a world series title often is decided on fluky happenings. Consider the case of John McGraw, who wins more flags than any other leader. McGraw's teams are constructed for long, gruelling races. Now look over the world series record of the same great leader and you will find that his team has been defeated more times than it has won the big emblem.

A BATTED ball hitting an uneven part of the infield in Washington lost the 1924 series to McGraw and the Giants. The Giants were leading the Senators and two were out in the late innings of the game when Muddy Ruel hit a little roller toward Fred Lindstrom. Fred backed up to take a nice hop on the rocket when it took a queer hop, scoring the tieing run.

THE Pirates exploded a lot of hard-hit balls that were caught. Take the last game, for example. Joe Harris cracked a liner to Combs that shook the centerfielder. Had the ball found the hole it would have gone so far that Joe probably could have circled the bases, just as Casey Stengel did in the same park in 1923. In the noisy seventh, Paul Waner came up with runners on third and first and one out. Paul left fly with one of his typical liners, but Combs, by rushing to his right was able to hold the whack to a sacrifice fly. Paul could have made a homer on this blow had it followed the course that some of his wallops have taken at Forbes Field—and a homer in this situation meant a two-run lead in the seventh with Miljus in a championship stride.

COLUMNS could be printed as to this and that of the series. To detract from the Yanks would not be proper as they are a great ball club. Personally, I don't think they are as clever as were some other championship teams on account of a slab staff that is a bit uncertain. They have no staff, for instance, to compare with Brown, Overall, Ruelback and Pfiester of the famed Cubs or Bender, Combs, Bush and Plank of the just as famous Athletics.

A PROMINENT American League writer, in discussing the skill of the Yankees, pays them a big tribute, but this scribe insists that the speed of the clubs of the junior circuit, aside from the Yanks in the race just finished, was very much on the "Class B" order, to use his own words. And the writer had spent much time with the Tigers, who finished in the first division.

EAST LIBERTY A. C. BACK ON GRIDIRON

Under the guiding hand of Mark Knapp, manager for the last seven years, the East Liberty A. C. again will represent the East End district in the lightweight gridiron ranks. The team is to practice at the Larimer avenue playgrounds Wednesday evening at which time all players wishing a tryout should report. Knapp is anxious to book games with such teams as Corpus Christi, Herman Homewoods, the Homewood Scholastics and Irwin Scholastics. For games call Highland 2419-J or write Mark Knapp, 305 Dodge way.

in the paper for an old friend that the officials scorers made a mistake and that it should have been charged up to me as a passed ball?"

Seldom in the history of baseball has a player pleaded so earnestly to take full blame for a play which sank the hopes of an entire city and a whole baseball club.

But John Gooch, the red-haired boy from Tennessee, the boy with a lovable Southern drawl, and with a truthful earnestness staring plainly from blue eyes, was anxious that Miljus, the Pittsburgh native-born boy, who had struck out Gehrig and Meusel, with three men on and none out in the ninth of the final world series game, should not be blamed. And so he earnestly and feverishly button-holed a baseball writer to take full blame and to remove any responsibility from the gallant Serbian boy who, until the ball in question got away to allow for a grotesque finish of a superb baseball drama, had been on the road to great baseball fame.

BALL WAS HIGH

The ball that Gooch missed was high, undoubtedly, and fairly wide. But Gooch, the catcher, at the time of the pitch, was squatting, oh, so eagerly, on the ground, anxiously awaiting the pitch to Lazzeri, upon which depended, perhaps, the fame, and unquestionably additional fortune to the Pirates.

The red-haired boy made a desperate stab for the ball, but it flicked off the top of his catcher's mitt and flew away to a distance so far away that Combs, Yankee runner, scored easily with the run that put the 1927 world series into the realm of historicity.

Two more remarks must be added to the evidence before this most important testimony is sealed. The first witness is a tall boy, wearing a baseball cap that somehow never fits properly the long head. His name is Miljus, unlucky pitcher, and his home is in Lawrenceville, Pittsburgh, Pa. In a measure he confutes the testimony of the frank Gooch. "It was a side-arm pitch which got away from me," says John Miljus mournfully. "Gooch did the best he could." The second witness is an expert observer, capable in judging pitches. The name of the second witness is Cuyler, fond of both parties concerned. He attests: "It was a sailor that got away from both Miljus and Gooch."

And this writer, poor thing, who had puffed a thousand times on a cigaret, and who was white with anxiety to see Miljus get out of that awful hole in the ninth against the Yankees, upon hearing the testimony, said to a friend:

"Gentlemen, they say the hero of this series is a member of the Yankees. Gentlemen, the hero of this series is a red-haired boy from Tennessee, who in his greatest crisis remembered the baseball code he expounded a long time ago in far-off Paso Robles.

pleting five of 'em. He ran the ends, hit the line, cracked the tackles and played back on the defensive in the safety man's post.

How many times did you read of Red Grange hitting the center of the line, the center, mind you, and how often did they use Red to crack the tackles. Welch is admittedly a better passer than Grange and very probably is a better all around player.

But as the season progresses, and Gibby continues his great work (for this guy Welch is no flash in the pan), you'll all be cheering for the black-haired lad, the genial, generous Gib, captain of one of Pitt's greatest teams, and a gentleman from the word go to the word stop.

There were one or two other upsets of startling importance last week. The joy in the Hangartner and Snavely households down in Lewisburg must have reigned unconfined, not refined, after Bucknell knocked off Penn State. Old Hank used to get a lot of kick out of playing on the teams that beat State, and he probably stood up on his hind legs and cheered when the team of which he is one of the coaches beat the Lions.

It didn't cause much joy in New Wilmington when St. Francis bumped off the United Presbyterians of Westminster 3 to 0. This 3-0 winning over Conference teams is getting to be a habit with the Saints. They beat Bethany two weeks ago by that score.

Waynesburg, hoping to down Thiel at least 14-0, found the opposition furnished by Dr. Holleran's eleven. They battled to a scoreless tie, and strange enough, neither team deserved to win.

TECH, W-J. WIN

Tech finished it's warming up series of games by taking Drexel into camp easily, very easily. W. & J. didn't have a minutes worry with Bethany, not a minute. Allegheny was laced by Dartmouth, though Behrhorst intercepted a pass and ran for a touchdown for the Methodists. Grove City managed to get a tie with John Carroll in Cleveland, though they should have won the ball game. And what Georgetown did to Davis-Elkins was nothing short of a shame.

To return to the Pitt-West Virginia game, let it be known that the two extremes of line play were exhibited in the Stadium. The Pitt line played as no Pitt line has played since the great 1916 forward wall crushed the life out of all opposition. And seven Tiller girls could have done better than the Mountaineer line. The great open spaces had nothing on the line that Rodgers sent on the field here. And before the game was over they were scattered to the four, five or 10 winds, and scattered well.

Do you know that Pitt has scored a total of 121 points in three games, and has kept its goal line unsullied. Tech has scored 131, but was scored on by Thiel and has yet to meet a major opponent. W. & J. has tallied 63 points and been scored on once, and West Virginia has scored 33 points against 46. That is how the Big Four teams stand now.

W. VA. OUTLOOK DISMAL

I have no doubt that it was somewhat of an off day for West Virginia. They will doubtlessly improve to some extent in the games to come, though on the face of what they showed, both offensively and defensively Saturday, they are due for lickings, in five of their remaining games, against W. & J., Tech, Missouri, Georgetown and Lafayette next Saturday.

Geneva College will leave tonight for Boston, where the Covenanters play Boston College in an intersectional game Wednesday. Geneva is returning to the scene of its great 1926 triumph, over Harvard.

PREFER BLONDES BECAUSE THEY ARE SCARCE

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—The reason why gentlemen prefer blondes is that there are more dark than light-haired women in the world.

For every golden-locked preference, Mrs. Ruth J. Maurer, beauty expert, says there are nine dusky-haired second choices.

"Gentlemen prefer blondes," observed Mrs. Maurer, whose experience of the past 20 years have brought her into contact with 50,000 blondes, brunettes and red heads, "because they are hard to find. Dark-haired women, according to beauty statistics, outnumber them 10 to 1.

"Another reason why men like them better is that masculine eyes focus like moving picture lenses. Blondes 'take' better than brunets. Light hair and eyes illuminate the human retina just as they do the silver screen.

"Blondes, though, aren't like blondes. They are blue blondes or pale pink blondes or strawberry, peach, ash, gold or red blondes. There are 18 distint shades of hair among the people of the white race. There are also 18 different colored eyes. There are 12 independent complexions.

"A pale pink blonde usually has a delicate strawberry complexion and China blue or moss-green eyes. A blue blonde as a rule possesses an almond skin and occasionally dark hazel or light brown eyes. An ash blonde is drab with chrome or light blue eyes.

"The scarcity of pure blondes accounts for the popularity of the peroxide bottle over the dye pot. Proportionately there are a greater number of bleached blondes than dyed-in-the-hair brunets.

"The typical American girl is a brunet, a warm brunet, with peach skin and hazel or medium brown eyes."

WOULD RESTORE GRANT CABIN

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 16.—The little log cabin in which Gen. U. S. Grant was born at Point Pleasant, O., would be returned to its original location, after more than 40 years of wandering about the country, under a bill passed by the Ohio House of Representatives.

For many years the cabin has been one of the attractions at the Ohio fair, having been purchased by the state after being moved about the country on private exhibition for several years. It was moved from Point Pleasant in 1885 to St. Louis, where it was displayed, and later taken to the world's fair in Chicago in 1893. The Ohio senate is expected to approve the house measure.

Forbes

Speculation Artificial Business O. K.

By B. C. FORBES

HOW thoroughly artificial the trading in certain stocks has become is illustrated by the fact that one day last week not a single share of Baldwin Locomotive changed hands, notwithstanding that it had previously been a prominent market "feature." Indeed, it was put through lively paces the following day.

Again: It is common for market "leaders" to jump half a dozen or half a score points skywards one day and to tumble quite as much the next day. Pools have been taking in hand numbers of unusually inactive issues and tossing them up violently. American Express shares, for example, were forced up fully 7 points during Thursday only to close with as much as a net loss on Friday. Houston Oil has been another dizzy performer. General Motors and even U. S. Steel have also been manipulated daringly.

WHEN a stock market behaves thus, and when front-page stories of a "three-million share day on the stock exchange" begin to appear, experienced investors pull in sail. The speculative weather has become too stormy for safety far from shore.

"Past standards have all been knocked galley-west," bulls triumphantly declare. "We live under entirely new conditions. Only old fogies hark back to what has been. The big money is to be made by having imagination enough to see what will be. There is so much money looking for investment in this country that it can only go into stocks and bonds—rates in the money market are altogether too low to attract funds owned by people of financial intelligence. The bull market has hardly more than begun. Don't you see that bonds are rising to new record quotations."

And the truth is, that the bulls in at least certain divisions of the market have had all the best of it thus far.

YET I, for one, am old fogy enough to note certain sobering developments. Brokers' loans have expanded enormously during the last week or two. The Federal reserve system's ratio of reserve has been pulled down close to last year's figure. The outpouring of new security issues, both foreign and domestic, continues unusually heavy, and the New York Stock Exchange governors announce plans to make available in this market a greatly increased number of foreign stocks. The long-continued inflow of gold has dried up.

TURNING to industry, old fogies cannot overlook a continuous weekly drop of 4 to 5 per cent in railway tonnage as compared with a year ago, net profits also below twelve months ago, a shrinkage of 20 per cent or more in steel production from a year ago, a rather sharp falling off recently in automobile sales, less satisfactory employment reports—the American Federation of Labor gives the present total of unemployed as 1,000,000. Retail trade is uneven, although still reasonably satisfactory.

The oil industry is, if anything, worse off than ever, with further dividend reductions and omissions threatened. The soft coal strike is still an unpleasant, though little discussed, factor. Our foreign trade balance is very light. Commodity price movements are irregular. Building has caught up with the war-created shortage at many places. Commercial failures are increasing.

THE political outlook is recognized as more uncertain now that President Coolidge has convinced most people that he will not accept another nomination. Congress is determined to launch investigations into various industries; farm relief will again soon come to the front; tariff disturbances are cropping out. The Mexican situation has again become disturbing.

THIS fact, however, should be clear: Most trade comparisons are now being made only with a year ago, when things were unusually active. Were comparisons carried farther back, they would look more cheerful.

It is not here intended to create the impression that conditions in America are bad. They are good rather than bad. But that they are good enough to warrant the three-ringed circus now daily witnessed in Wall Street is very much open to questions.

STOCKS REACT SHARPLY TO SELLING

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Renewal of selling pressure against pivotal industrials and rails brought about another sharp reaction in today's stock market. Net declines ran from 1 to 5 points despite the efforts of pools to revive bullish interest by marking up a few specialties to new high records, and the retention of the 4 per cent call money rate in the face of another deficit in clearing house reserve.

Although a drop of 47,924 tons in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation was about in line with expectations, liquidation of Steel common was quite persistent, the stock dropping below 144 as against a high of 160½ less than a month ago. Bethlehem sold down to 54 as speculative hopes of a dividend resumption this year faded away.

Outside the stock market, chief interest centered in a drop of $3.50 a bale in cotton futures in reflection of a weak Liverpool market and more favorable crop weather. Case Threshing Machine, Air Reduction, Union Carbide, American Water Works, Abitibi Power, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, New York Central and many other recent leaders sold down 3 to 5 points.

MOVIE BOMBED IN STRIKE

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 10.—The Logan picture theater in North Minneapolis was partly wrecked by a bomb early today. Considerable damage was done to the building, but no one was injured.

This is the second bombing of moving picture house since the strike of motion picture operators, stage hands, scenic artists, bill posters and musicians began here a month ago.

WIDOW, BEACH PLEAD NOT GUILTY

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Mrs. Margaret T. Lilliendahl and Willie Beach, jointly indicted for the murder of Dr. A. William Lilliendahl, the former's husband, today pleaded not guilty. Release on bail was denied.

The plea was entered before Supreme Court Justice Luther A. Campbell in the Atlantic County Court of Quarter sessions.

It was the first time the prisoners faced each other since their arrest.

Dr. Lilliendahl, a retired physician, was shot dead while motoring with his wife near Hammonton, on September 15. Mrs. Lilliendahl maintained that he was attacked by two Negroes who jumped on the running board of their car, shot the doctor and robbed her.

Beach, a neighbor of the Lilliendahls, came into the case when the police found that he and Mrs. Lilliendahl had carried on correspondence, she using the name of Peggy Anderson.

Hopes Fade on Bethlehem.

Hopes of a resumption of common dividends by Bethlehem Steel Corporation in January, though not definitely abandoned, are growing fainter as the steel situation fails to recover as expected. Bethlehem's earnings in the third quarter will probably be less than $1 a share on the 1,800,000 common shares, against $1.56 in the second quarter and $1.01 for the first half. This will make the nine months' earnings around $3 a share and, while some pick up is expected in the final quarter of the year, it does not seem likely now that Bethlehem will earn much in excess of $4.50 a share for the year.

Aviation on Sound Basis.

Sailing on the Steamship Olympic, Charles L. Lawrence, president of Wright Aeronautical Corporation, said: "I believe American aviation is founded upon sound basis and will continue to make steady progress. While it is true we have smaller planes than they have abroad, most of our companies are making money, whereas in Europe, with a 10 per cent government subsidy in most countries, they are not showing any profit. The progress of aviation, to gain any permanent efficiency, must not be too rapid but rather slow and certain, and I believe those latter principles, which are being followed in this country, will tend to strengthen air travel in the long run. It is not time to establish transatlantic air service, and I hope, for the safety of those in the undertaking, it will not be done. As to our company, we are in a very satisfactory position and expect to earn $7.75 a share or better on the stock this year."

Jones & Laughlin Steel.

Declines in steel consumption and prices were reflected in third quarter earnings of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation. Report for the three months ended September 30, to be published soon, will show less net income than the preceding quarter which returned $3,574,079 or $4.45 a share on the common stock. Net income for the first nine months of the year also was less than in the corresponding period of 1926 when $11,759,536 or $15.19 a share was earned on the common. Some improvement in demand for most types of steel has been shown in the past two weeks, but operations remain at low levels for the year. The price of bars and shapes is $5 a ton lower than a year ago. The fourth quarter start is not promising so return for the entire year will be less than in the exceptionally good year of 1926 when net income of $11,145,934 or $13.46 a share on the common was reported.

Preferred—and Then Some.

Chicago and North Western preferred has been one of the sensations among high grade preferred railroad stocks. It sold recently at a new high of $150 a share. It pays 7 per cent so that the yield is only 4.7 per cent. But the reason for this is found in the participating feature which reads: "Preferred stock is entitled to 7 per cent, then common 7 per cent, then preferred 3 per cent, then common 3 per cent, then preferred and common share pro rata."

Youngstown Operations Gain.

Mill operations have gained slightly in both steel making and finishing departments in the Youngstown district. The gain is largely in steel pipe output, with 15 of the 20 units in commission against 13 the past week. Wrought skelp production has dipped to 75 per cent, or about 5 per cent down. Sheets are holding around 70 per cent, and hot strip, with independents, has receded slightly, while merchant bar output is higher. The situation largely reflects the fluctuating character of demand, which is strictly of hand-to-mouth character. Carnegie Steel Company is operating [illegible] per cent, while Youngstown Sheet and Tube, by virtue of heavier steel pipe schedules, is operating 60 to 65 per cent here.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe.

Although current prices for cast iron pipe are the lowest in several years, the recent quotation on a New York contract of $37.15, comparing with an average price, New York, of $50.25 last year, United States Cast Iron & Foundry is still managing to show some profit each month. Earnings of the first half were large and latest estimates are that net for the year will be around $22 a share on the 120,000 common shares, against $35.95 in 1926 and $38.54 in 1925. The profit trend, however, is steadily declining and, unless there is a decided change in the situation, first half profits next year will be small. The company has been helped by the increasing demand for centrifugal pipe which now constitutes an important proportion of its total output. This pipe, while lighter and cheaper to make, is claimed tod be stronger than the old sand cast product.

Directors of Pere Marquette Railway Company are not likely to declare an extra cash dividend on the common stock in the immediate future. E. N. Mr. Brown said he would regard it as bad taste in view of the commission's decision on the stock dividend question and on its valuation to do anything in the immediate future relative to an extra cash dividend.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The cotton market opened easy today at a decline of 25 to 35 points under liquidation by Saturday's buyers, who appeared to be disappointed over the showing of Liverpool and who may also have been influenced by more favorable weather in the South.

Covering or commission house and trade buying on the bullish view of Saturday Government crop readers was supplied around the opening prices, and the market soon showed net losses of 53 to 62 points, December selling off to 20.85c and March to 21.18c. There was a little more buying at this reaction, and after initial selling orders had been absorbed, prices rallied 15 or 20 points from the lowest on covering, but the market had rather an unsettled appearance at the end of the first hour.

Private cables reported hedging, combined with continental and Bombay selling in Liverpool, and Liverpool was a seller here in early trading.

The early decline carried the market off to 20.71c for December and 21.10c for March, or about 65 to 70 points below Saturday's closing quotations, and in the case of December contracts, 103 points below the high price touched after the publication of the Government crop report on Saturday. The volume of offerings, attributed largely to liquidation of contracts, carried over recent declines or bought on the advance of Saturday morning, tapered off at these figures and trading became comparatively quiet, with the tone a shade steadier on covering. At mid-day December was selling around 20.80c, or about 11 points up from the lowest.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—No sales were reported in the raw sugar market early today, but the undertone was easy and there were offerings at last paid prices of 4.30c for Cuban duty paid.

Continued inactivity in the spot market and weakness abroad led to renewed selling pressure in raw sugar futures, prices at midday showing net losses of 2 to 4 points. The selling seemed to come principally from houses with European connections, and apparently was inspired by reports of more favorable conditions for growing crops there.

No improvement was reported in the demand for refined sugar and while list prices were unchanged at 5.80@6.10c for fine granulated, it was reported that practically all of the higher priced refiners were accepting business below last quotations.

Reasons for Prosperity.

Large income from crops, easy money, prospects of improved conditions for many major industries in 1928, building construction is still giving a good account, firmer commodity prices, an optimistic stock market, a healthy bond market, foreign trade holds up remarkably well, government finances are in better shape than for more than a decade, and no evidence that the election bogie must necessarily hamper business next year.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—With a blizzard reported in Alberta and snow in Saskatchewan, wheat prices displayed an early upward trend today. Corn was easier, owing to favorable weather conditions over the corn belt. All trading lacked volume, speculations holding off pending the government crop report this afternoon. Opening unchanged to ⅛ to ⅜c higher, wheat later scored general upturns. Corn started unchanged to ⅛c off, and subsequently weakened all around. Oats held firm. Provisions were inclined to sag.

At noon wheat was at the same as Saturday's finish, at ⅛c higher, and corn 1c to 1⅛c down.

In connection with reports of blizzard weather in Canada causing further delay to threshing and tending to lower the quality of wheat, estimates were current here today that Canada has so far marketed about 25,000,000 bushels less wheat than at this time last year. On the other hand, domestic arrivals of new wheat are of surprising extent, receipts today at Duluth and Minneapolis totaling 2,198 cars, against 516 cars a year ago.

Scantiness of future delivery offerings of wheat counted to a noticeable degree at times today as a factor favoring friends of higher prices. Bearish advices from Argentina and Australia were given relatively little attention in the face of Liverpool cables suggesting likelihood of better demand which was said to be kept in check principally by the large movement of United States spring wheat.

EGGS TOO EXPENSIVE, MINERS USE TOMATOES

BELLAIRE, O., Oct. 11.—Tomatoes have replaced eggs as the weapons of union miner sympathizers in their attacks on men being taken to the mines of Eastern Ohio which are being operated nonunion. Cost of eggs is prohibitive.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS TO OBSERVE COLUMBUS DAY

Wednesday, Columbus Day, will be observed by all parochial schools in Pittsburgh as a full holiday. Exercises commemorative of the discovery of America by the great explorer will be held in all schools of the diocese tomorrow afternoon.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

A fairly active market for practically all lines of fruit and vegetables opened today at the local wholesale produce district. Home-grown green corn was increased in price, while mushrooms in bushel lots were somewhat lower. The fruit market was fairly active. All fruit sold at about unchanged quotations.

The poultry market was easy and the demand was generally fair. The supplies were liberal and the prices remained about the same.

The butter market was firm. The decrease of 1 cent per pound which was made on Saturday went into effect today. Eggs and cheese were also firm. No change in the quotations was made.

Carlot supplies were very heavy, a total of 810 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 11 cars of apples, 12 cabbage, 3 cantaloupes, 2 celery, 1 grapefruits, 187 grapes, 1 lemons, 12 lettuce, 7 onions, 19 oranges, 4 peaches, 7 pears, 10 peppers, 8 potatoes, 12 sweet potatoes, 2 watermelons, 4 prunes, 4 cucumbers and 5 cauliflower.

The hay market was firm and the receipts light. Grain was somewhat limited in receipts and the market steady.

STANDARD SANITARY RESUMES UPWARD MOVE HERE

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Though starting off with vigorous buying and a period of pronounced strength in nearly all the important issues, it was not long before the contraction of banking accommodation, which exercised such influence on dealings on the stock exchange, also had its effect on the trading in the curb market. The early advances were either reduced or lost before midday and in the later trading a large part of the dealings consisted of liquidation of speculative holdings.

During the early period of strength, Realty Associates of Brooklyn advanced 7 points to 302 and Celotex moved up over a point. Commonwealth preferred made a new high record at 103 and Commonwealth Edison rose over 2 points to above 164. Long Island Power and Light followed last week's advance with a further gain of a point and Borden moved up nearly 2 points, followed by a quick reaction.

Celluloid made a fractional gain to 101⅝, but then fell to 100. Ford of Canada, after advancing 2 points to 560, had a quick drop to 555, and Deere & Co. yielded over 5 points.

Many of the utilities were fairly active but did not materially alter their market position. United Light and Power was heavily traded within a narrow range.

A feature of the bond market was the selling of Phillips Petroleum 5¼s, which declined to below 94.

Oil stocks became heavy after the first few minutes, Standard Oil of Indiana having a further loss.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Following is the official list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (000 omitted in sales column in bond list):

STOCKS.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Bond prices drifted in an aimless fashion in today's market, with trading on a rather limited scale. Italian issues continued to sag after last week's period of strength, and most of the recently active domestic issues were in supply.

Standard Oil of New York 4½s changed hands in moderate amounts around their peak price for the year, fractionally higher than the previous close. International Telephone 4½s, Illinois Central (Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans) 4½s were among the issues leaning toward heaviness.

United States government bonds were quiet and irregular.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column in bond list (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

BANDITS HOLD HIGH HAND IN GAME

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Five bandits, heavily armed, entered the Club Biarritz, said to be a fashionable gambling house, commanded the patrons to face the wall, and looted the office of the cashier of more than $8,000 in cash. The patrons were not molested.

The five men, well dressed, entered as though they intended to take part in a game. Then suddenly, the patrons said, every part of the room was covered with guns.

Two of the bandits entered the cashier's office, reappeared, called off their aids, and escaped in a waiting automobile.

The balance for playground improvements remaining from the peoples bond issue of 1926 is $208,125, the report stated.

San Toy Mining Up On Local Board

Spirited demand for Standard Sanitary Manufacturing common marked the start of the new week on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange with the stock pushing into new high ground for the year shortly after the session started. Standard was the prime feature of last week's dealings when it scored an advance of approximately 7 points on an upward movement which was practically uninterrupted from Monday to Saturday.

In addition to the report that the shares are to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange, it is understood the company's new process, which renders enameled surfaces impervious to certain acid stains, has demonstrated its success and given Standard's goods a considerable headway over some of its competitors.

Opening on Standard today was at a large fractional advance over Saturday's close and was immediately followed by a further upturn of more than a point where the move halted to absorb such offerings as were brought out by the gain.

In the fuel division a little unsteadiness was noted owing to the unsettled condition in the oil and gas stocks on the New York exchange, but there was no evidence of strong pressure.

San Toy Mining, one of the so-called "penny" stocks, furnished a little diversion in the late morning session when it indulged in a little upturn to 7 cents a share, as compared with the last previous close of 4 cents. Several thousand shares changed hands on the move. Calculated on a percentage basis this was a rise in market value of 75 per cent. It is understood the company's cash holdings amount to 4 cents a share on the 6,000,000 ($1 par) shares outstanding.

(Delayed in transmission)

CHICAGO—I have just learned that fire broke out here on the night of October 8, 1871, devastating the entire business portion of the city. Mr. Rickard assures me he will go on with his plans for the Dempsey-Tunney fight, as though nothing had happened.

The area burned over comprised three and one-third square miles; 17,450 buildings were destroyed, and 100,000 people left homeless. The money loss is estimated at $200,000,000.

I am also permitted to say that the public parks of Chicago have a combined area of 1,900 acres, while the public schools rank second to none.

The enrollment of pupils in 1904 was 257,236. The commerce and the industries of Chicago are too vast and varied to be enumerated here.

BUGS BAER Says

THE Yanks sank their last putt with the Pirates still on the first tee.

Miljus and his rubberoid arm hung up a series record by pitching 60,000 spectators home.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

It took the Yanks eight hours and twenty-nine minutes to put the Pirates back in the National League.

The longest game was the second in Pittsburgh, which took two hours and twenty minutes. This game dragged like snowshoes in mud.

The last game took only two hours and one minute. This was because it took Miljus the two hours to make up his mind to make a wild fungo in one minute.

Five pinch punchers were used in the series. The only one who got on base was Brickell, and he got there because Lazzeri played good American polo with his grounder in the last game.

Which indicates that it would have been foolish to put in an emergency student for Wiley Moore in the eighth inning of the last game.

The morning after a world series is a sweet breakfast for an infielder. He can drop his hard-boiled eggs, cross his feet and fumble his grapefruit without being hooted by 60,000 waiters.

Quigley, Moran, Nallin and Ormsby got through the four games without an argument, which Kid Gleason claims is bad baseball.

The real inside on the Cuyler-Bush argument has now been made public by the fractured news bureau.

The story is that Cuyler refused to slide on a base on balls.

Bush then fined him fifty bills for wearing shinguards in left field.

Cuyler was taking his shower bath that afternoon following the game and, seeing Bush, stuck his head out from under the showers and yelled:

"I'll take water from nobody."

Bush fined Cuyler another fifty dollars for soaping himself against the grain.

And what makes Bush all the madder is that Cuyler gets his loser's share of the series money without having earned it.

Cuyler retorts that he had the interests of the Pirates at heart and was perfectly willing to do his share of losing with the rest of the team.

Cuyler is going to shoot moose in Canada. If Barney Dreyfuss happens to be in the Canadian woods he had better not grunt.

And that's the inside of the Cuyler-Bush case. Endorsed by very reliable gossip and validated by unimpeachable rumors.

World Series Over

Let's Get Back to Work!

The world series ended in New York Saturdav afternoon with the Pittsburgh team losing four games in a row.

Not a happy ending, from a local standpoint, to the season's sport.

There is only one way to forget disappointment and to make up the time spent in watching the scoreboards—GET BACK TO WORK!

Pittsburgh's daily tasks have been interrupted—the whole town last week stopped work to talk about and watch the Pirates.

Now it's all over; let's resume business at once, briskly and cheerfully, and make up for lost time.

Grand Jury Probe

Bar Association Acts With Vigor.

It is refreshing to note the prompt, vigorous action of the Allegheny County Bar Association in connection with Pittsburgh's election fraud scandal.

According to a resolution adopted unanimously, a grand jury investigation of cheating in the recent primary will be asked by a committee of five members "in the event of the failure to bring before the bar of justice all who are responsible, directly or indirectly, for such outrages."

The association also is prepared to appoint a committee of five of its members to aid the district attorney in his investigation of the shocking facts revealed.

The Bar Association acted in this matter in a manner indicating it considered the situation an extraordinary one. It is—most extraordinary. It demands prompt and the most efficient handling.

The people will not stand for a "whitewash" or for "pigeonholing" of indictments. They want the ballot thieves put in jail, where they belong.

They will be happy to find the Bar Association ready to help secure swift and sure justice for those who, with the aid of murder and theft, have polluted the polls of Allegheny county.

General Plan Is Needed On Projected Bridges

Representatives of various associations organized for the promotion of additional bridge projects have indorsed the decision of the county commissioners that a special election in January shall be held to decide the question of loans. Quite properly, the officials were commended for delaying the matter until after the general election. At a special election there will be no diverting issues and the public will be able to concentrate directly on the merits of the bond questions to be set before them.

Meantime there will be plenty of time for the various bodies to prepare their claims for recognition. Just now there appears to be too much pulling in too many directions. Naturally all localities seek to have their projects considered as being of first importance. These merely are local views besides which there should be the general view of which is the greater benefit to the public at large.

There are quite a number of "boosting" associations each devoted to its own pet project. They are to be commended for their efforts to serve their local communities but it should not be forgotten that service to the greater number must be the first consideration. There should be a program. All projects appear to be desirable. From the several plans there should evolve an orderly group plan.

The matter appears to be one in which good results would be obtained from a joint meeting of the City Planning Commission, County Planning Commission and representatives of the various interested associations. Get together, gentlemen, and formulate a plan under which all may co-operate.

Woodside's Right to Be Candidate Is Upheld

The decision of Chief Justice Von Moschzisker of the State Supreme Court that Robert G. Woodside, former sheriff, may legally be elected controller of the county, is of importance in that it establishes a precedent. It means that acts providing for tenure of office employ the term "year" in an official instead of a calendar sense. The official year may be longer or shorter than an exact calendar year.

The decision is given on an appeal from the Common Pleas Court of Allegheny county, which is sustained. An equity suit was brought against the county commissioners to restrain them from putting Woodside's name on the primary and general election ballots. The injunction was asked because, if elected controller, two calendar years would not have passed since he completed the term of sheriff.

The act states that two years must elapse between occupancy of the office of sheriff and controller by the same person. No mention is made of the kind of years they must be and the court has based its decision on the fact that the election act fixing terms of officers implies that official years may be of varying number of days, because incumbency is as of the "first Monday of January after their election."

The decision is a reasonable one, based on intelligent interpretation of the law, but it again points to the necessity of lawmakers being absolutely specific in the wording of acts, so that intent never may be obscure. Acts open to several interpretations always are a source of trouble.

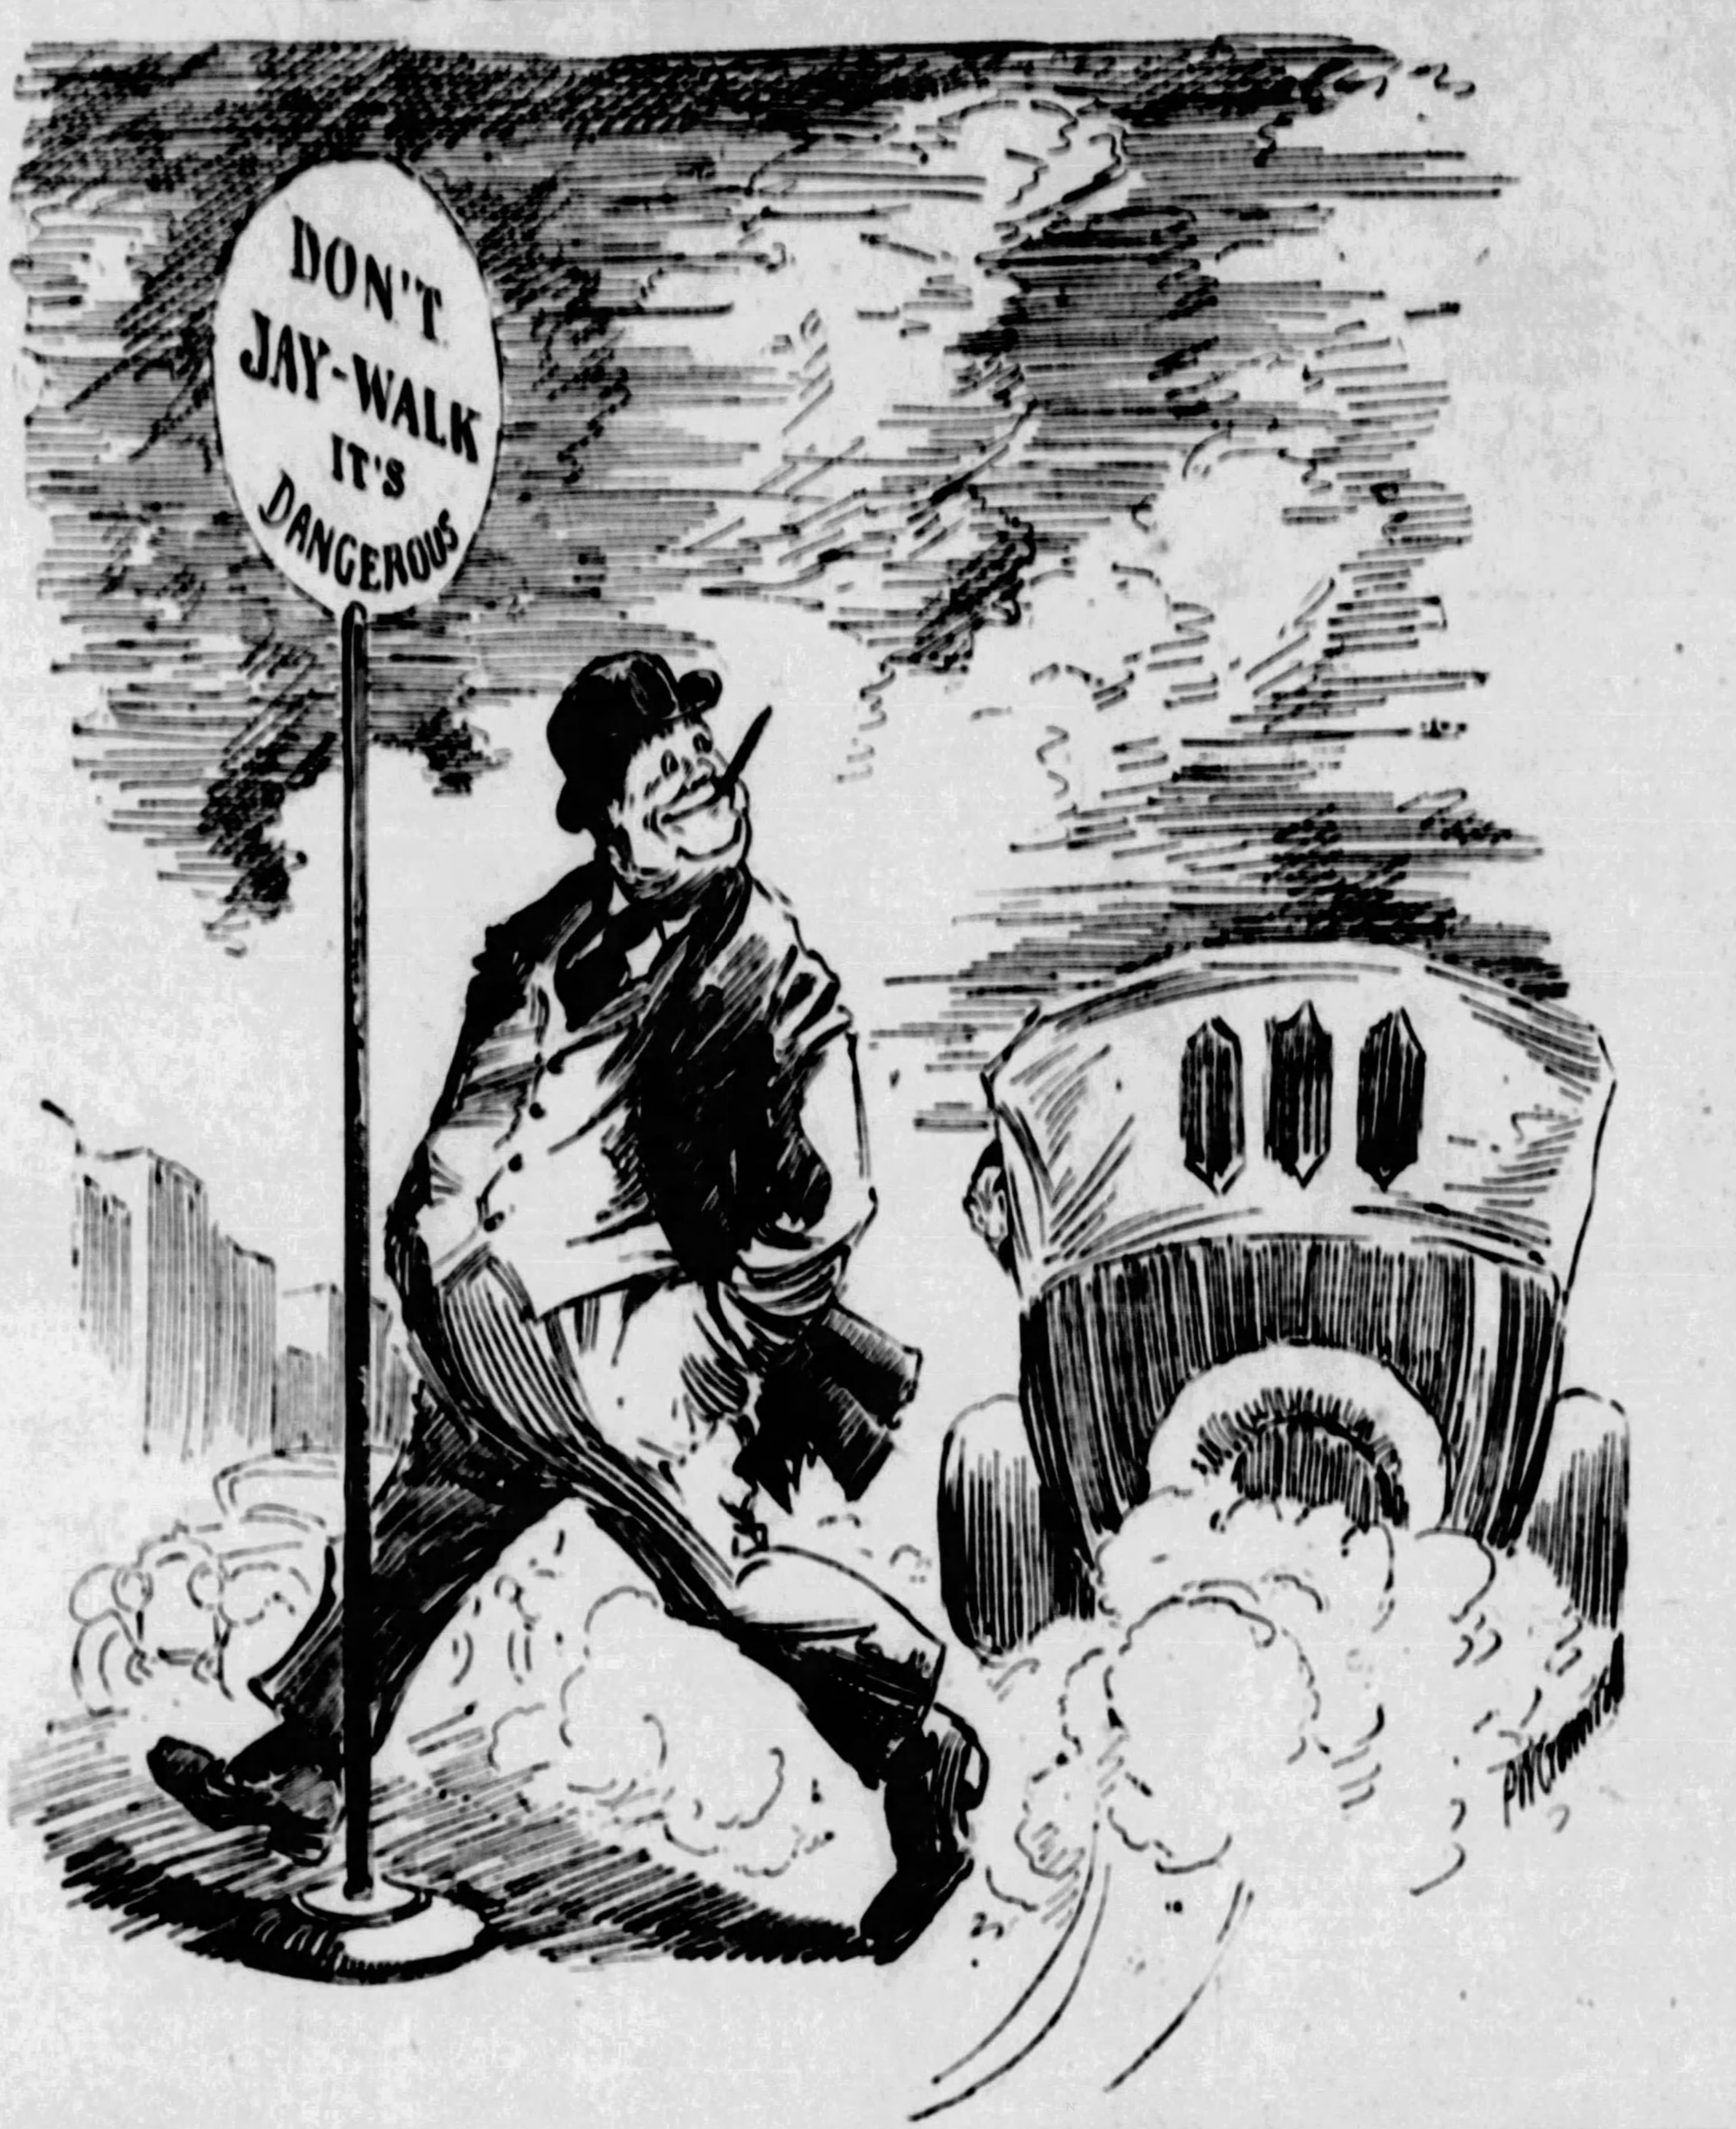
FOOLISH BRAVADO



Garrett P Serviss Says:

Mental Looming

"In Los Angeles a man reads questions in sealed envelopes that do not leave your possession, answers mental questions, and with the so-called 'magnetic stuff' will pick an object and give the complete history of the same correctly. How are those things done?—J. H. W."

MENTAL looming plays a large part in the explanation, possibly the principal part. By mental looming I mean the common tendency to see things bigger than, and different from what they really are. This applies specially to temporary impressions in which surprise, wonder, or prepossession are concerned. All of us have to be continually on guard against such self-deception.

One of the most fascinating pages in the old illustrated history of the American Revolution which I used to pore over when a boy was that on which was told the story of how Washington one night had some breastworks thrown up on Dochester Heights overlooking Boston, and the next morning the British troops hastily evacuated the city because through the magnifying effects of the morning fog, which gave rise to mental looming, they were convinced that the Americans had them surrounded with impregnable fortifications. Another historic instance of mental looming occurred at the beginning of our Civil War, when Gen. McClellan was delayed for weeks with his army preparing to besiege rows of "great guns," which were only palmetto logs.

I believe that careful analysis of such cases as the reading of the contents of unopened letters, the answering of unspoken mental questions, etc., would invariably show the agency of mental looming. The "complete histories" that you speak of will be found to be extremely incomplete, consisting of a few master strokes of guesswork based sometimes on secretly acquired foreknowledge, and at other times on shrewd "mind-reading," or "pulse-reading," in which practitioners of the art of fooling the unwary are often astonishingly expert. They have all the ordinary "tests" classified, and know the percentage of chance in guessing.

You will observe that there is a common technique used by all the "mediums," or whatever else they call themselves. That fact alone should instantly put you on your guard. An attentive reading of such books as Houdini's "Magician Among the Spirits" will give you information about many other tricks besides those of the spiritualists. It will reveal to you the atmosphere of prepared mystery, of concealment, deception, illusion, that is thrown as a cloak around every form of fooling the public.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Do You Give Up?

OFTEN you wish you were the person of high spirits and good nature.

As a bread winner, and apparently happy in his accomplishments along the line of his vocation, you wonder how he can be so active.

It is not difficult for you to convince yourself that he has not so many trials and problems as you have.

You think if he were to experience the pains and aches which you endure he would soon lose his buoyant and enthusiastic interest in life.

You may not know it, but many of the apparently happiest and most care-free people have hours of pain and vexation far more serious than yours.

You give up too easily.

You are too sensitive to mental and physical states.

You expect too much in the way of material wealth.

You are out of patience with physical pain and mental disturbance.

You might present a better personal appearance to the world.

By so doing you might relieve your mental distress; your bodily discomfort would be less if you were more carefully groomed.

Creature comforts, systematically attended to, aid poise.

THOUGHTS OF THE GREAT—

The wisdom of the wise and the experience of the ages may be preserved by the quotation.—Isaac Disraeli.

It often happens that if a lie be believed only for an hour, it has done its work and there is no further occasion for it.—Swift.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early up and it came upon me to write a sonnet which I did with fair ease and sent it to a magazine editor by messenger. And he telephoned that aside from it having 15 lines it was a sorry effort.

So to lunch with Gil Patten who used to write the Frank Merriwell stories under the pseudonym of Burt L. Standish and we played pool for the reckoning and he trounced me. And afterward through the town afoot, looking in shop windows and longing for great wealth.

In the evening with my wife to an Armenian restaurant and heard a man make strange, sweet music blowing into a sea shell and he told me he had mastered this accomplishment in Samoa. Later to sit on a bench in a public square in contentful talk until the moon rode high.

New York this summer took to the white short dinner coat—known in tropical climates as the "monkey coat." It is worn with black evening trousers and comes to a point in the back like those snug-fitting short coats that tambourine-capped bellboys wear in smart hotels.

It is told of a prominent magazine editor who wore one earlier in the season to a very ultra dinner party. Afterward he was in a drawing room and a lady to whom he had not been introduced caught her dress in a chair. He gallantly unfastened her. Turning to him sweetly, she said: "Thank you and will you please bring us a fresh pot of coffee."

Another gentleman wearing a monkey coat up the avenue at dusk bowed to a friend. The friend looked at him until a light of recognition came, when he exclaimed: "I thought you were a waiter going some place for change."

* * *

Manhattan, incidentally, has failed to stage a comeback for full evening clothes. For a time spike tails were seen, but in a short time wearers went back to the more comfortable dinner jacket—or Tuxedo. It is only at extremely formal functions full dress is seen. Even some dress suit rental parlors carry only Tuxedos.

The well-dressed man no longer wears visible jewelry of any sort. He may sport a wrist watch or carry a cigaret case, but they are only seen in fleeting glances. Even those who, for some sentimental reason, wear rings, remove them in evening dress.

The silk hat will supplant the collapsible opera hat, which gained a certain popularity among bloods last winter. Male styles for America formerly came from London, but not any more. Indeed, New York is setting the pace for Picadilly.

* * *

On such tony topics it will not be amiss to report the rumor liquor is no longer being served at real four hundred dinners. Hostesses have had too many anguishing delays as result of lingering over high-powered cocktails. Meat has been scorched, vegetables overcooked and dinners have become a blurr. They have found the enjoyable dinners are those where guests sit down soberly to the feast. The conversation is sprightly instead of being sclerosed with thick-tongued nonsense. After dinner most hosts or hostesses serve cordials or highballs generously, but no liquor before the meal.

It is told of one matron whose dinner was held up an hour by a guest who arrived thoroughly crocked and in a business suit. It was a formal affair.

"Terribly sorry," he muttered. "Hope I have not spoiled things."

"You have not only spoiled my dinner," she said, coldly, "but you have given me a frightful headache. This dinner is for ladies and gentlemen. You have proved you are not a gentleman, and the butler will give you needed assistance to your car."

It is further related the gentleman sailed for Europe two days later and has remained there for seven months—on the water wagon.

The Aristocracy

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Ganna Walska is reported by the press to have bought some carved emeralds worth $500,000, which she wore with great eclat.

The common impression seems to be that possessing an article of great value and showy nature is an indication that the possessor has plenty of means.

One of the striking things, however, about the upper class British women is their modesty of dress. They display neither jewels nor perfumes, and their gowns are remarkably simple.

If you want to know whether a thing has a mark of superiority or not, look at the superior people and then at the common people.

Every low-class girl in the world wants jewelry, and most all of them souse themselves with perfumes. It is a sign of superiority and intelligence to go without these things rather than to display them.

If you want to be among the real aristocracy, cultivate a low voice, modest apparel and seemly conduct. These, with brilliancy of mind, stamp you as out of the ordinary. But if you just have an ordinary mind and low tastes and indulge in display, you are a most ordinary person, no matter how much money you have.

Don't show off. It is a feeling all too common, and if you want to be an uncommon person do not indulge in it.

The real aristocracy are modest and unassuming. If Lindbergh had been of a cheap and common mold, he would have capitalized his popularity by getting into money schemes and probably appearing in vaudeville. He didn't. He confined himself to the business of flying, which is the business he knows.

Compare his actions with that of some other people who capitalize their temporary popularity and you will see the difference between the real aristocracy and the fake.

If you want your fame to be established, do something worth while and let other people talk about it.

Do not take advantage of some meritorious publicity to exploit yourself. Blowing your own horn is not very good business when you can get somebody else to blow it for you.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

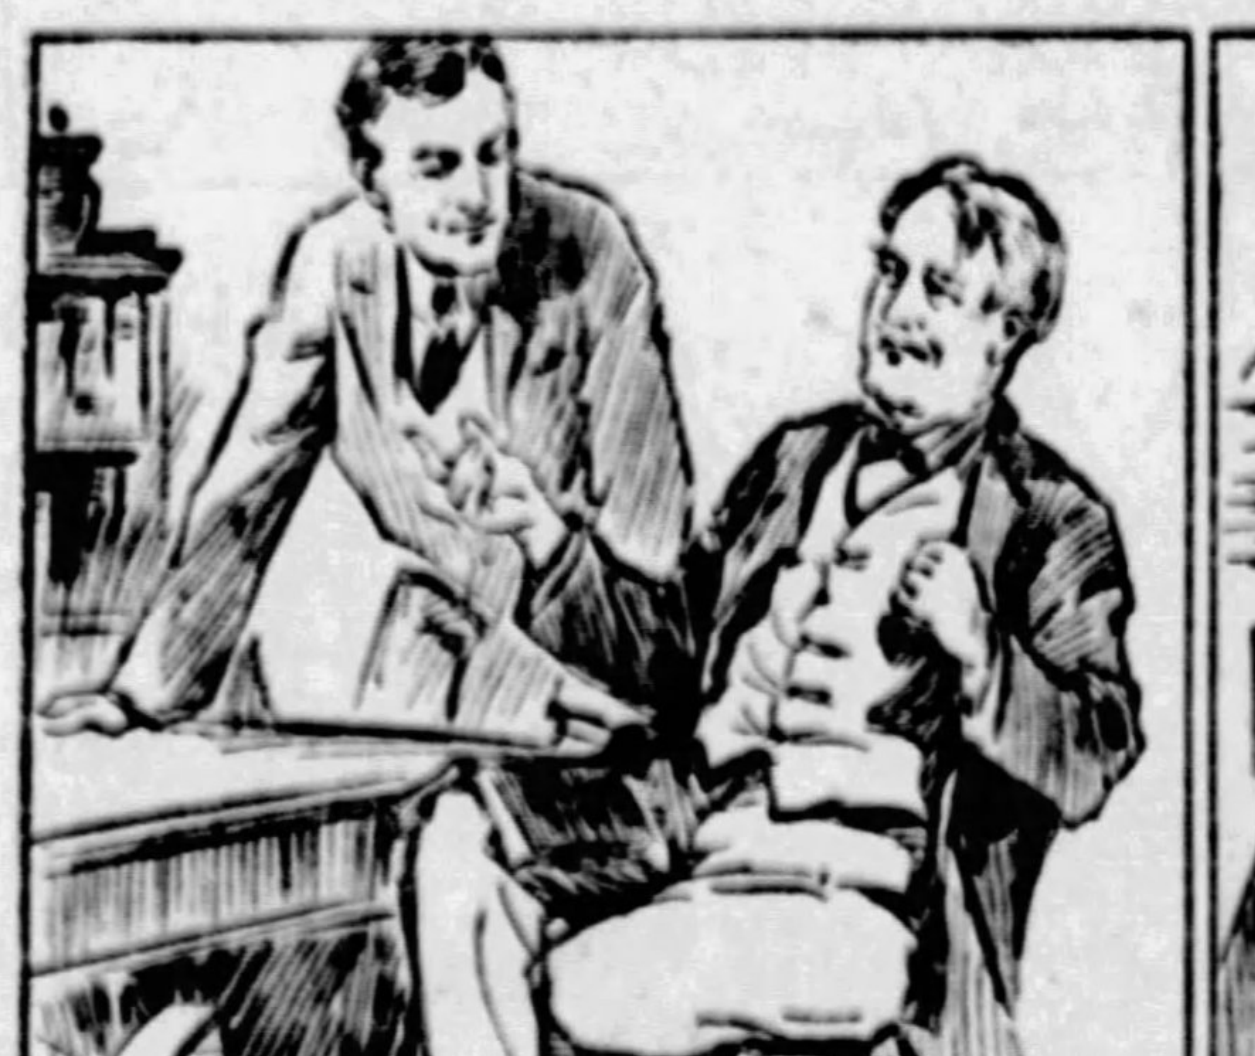
Your Enemy

YOUR friend can help with kindly cheer and gentle words of praise to bring your heart's desires near, to brighten all your days. For any task you undertake your friend has loving eyes, he knows the effort which you make, your struggles he will prize. And so, through trials and through tears, through hopes that wax and wane, your friend will comfort all your years, bring balm for every pain. But what of him, your enemy, whose aid you scorn to ask? His glance can never fail to see the flaws in every task. He brings no touch of tenderness for any least mistake, no sympathy when you confess the errors you may make. Yet, ah, what strength he lends your arm, what force to gain your goal.

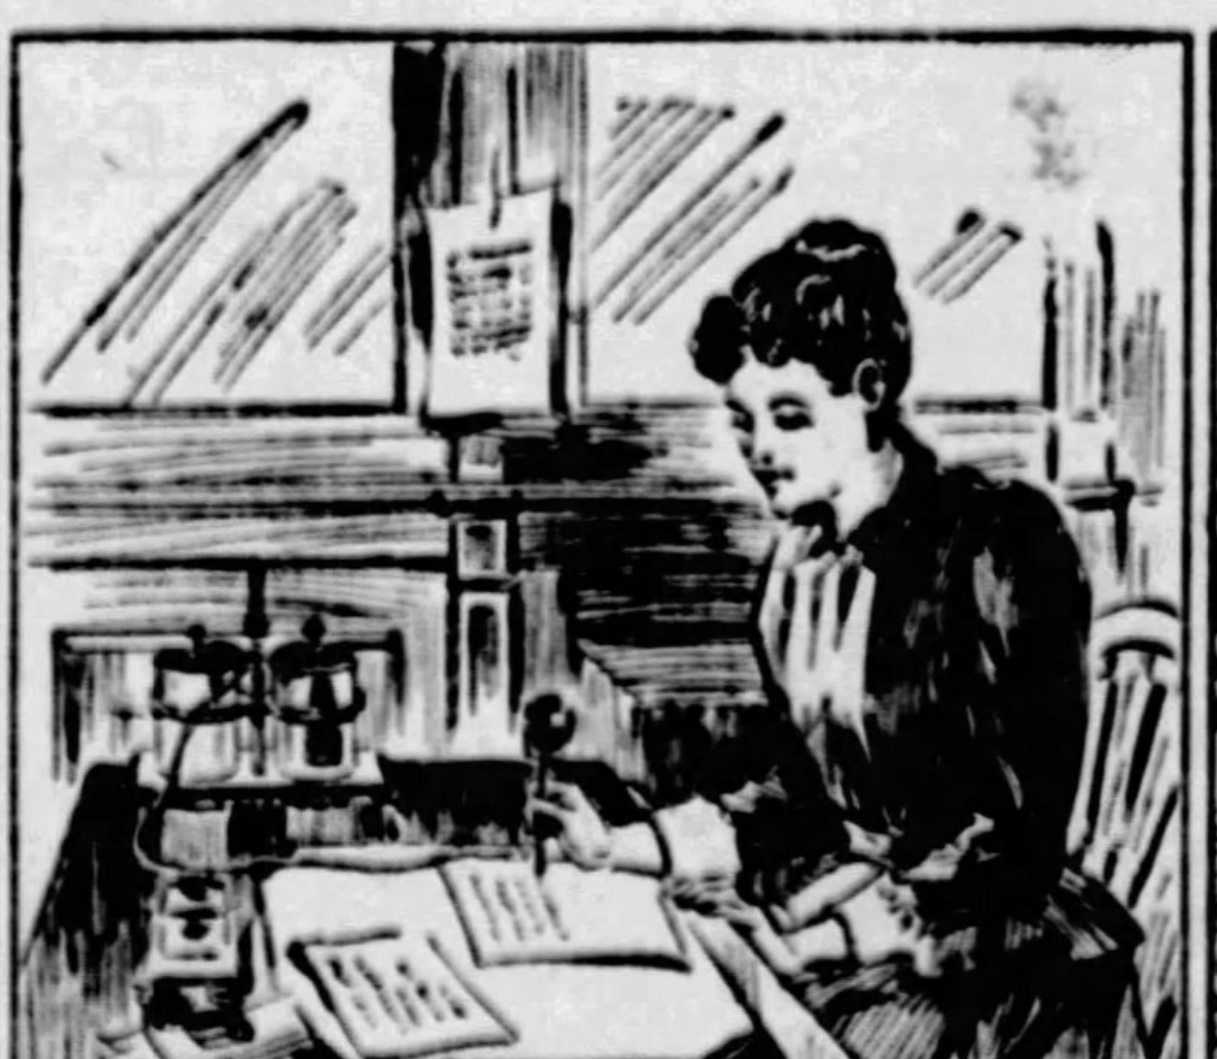
THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

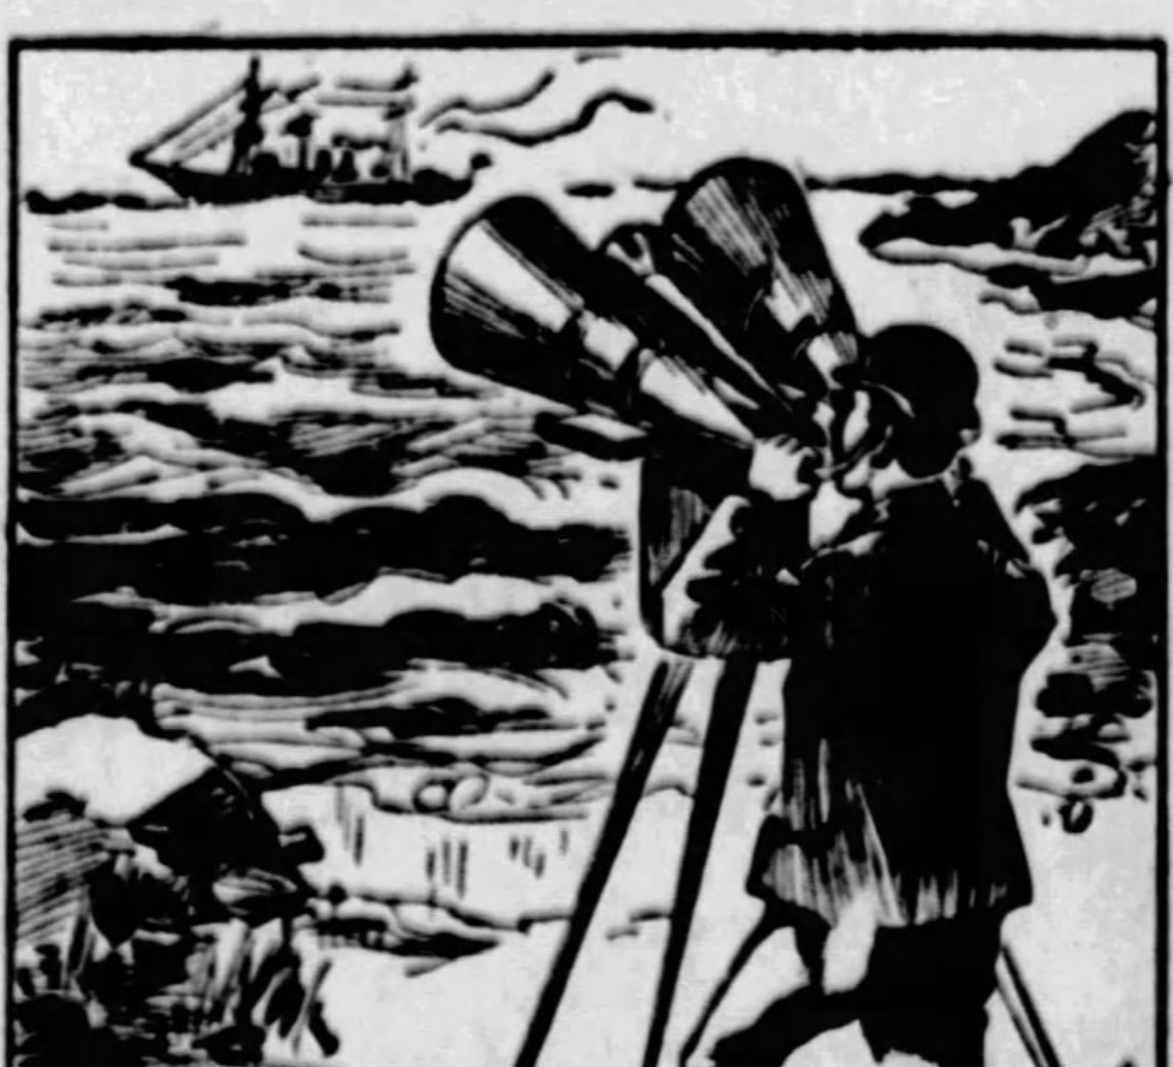
Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



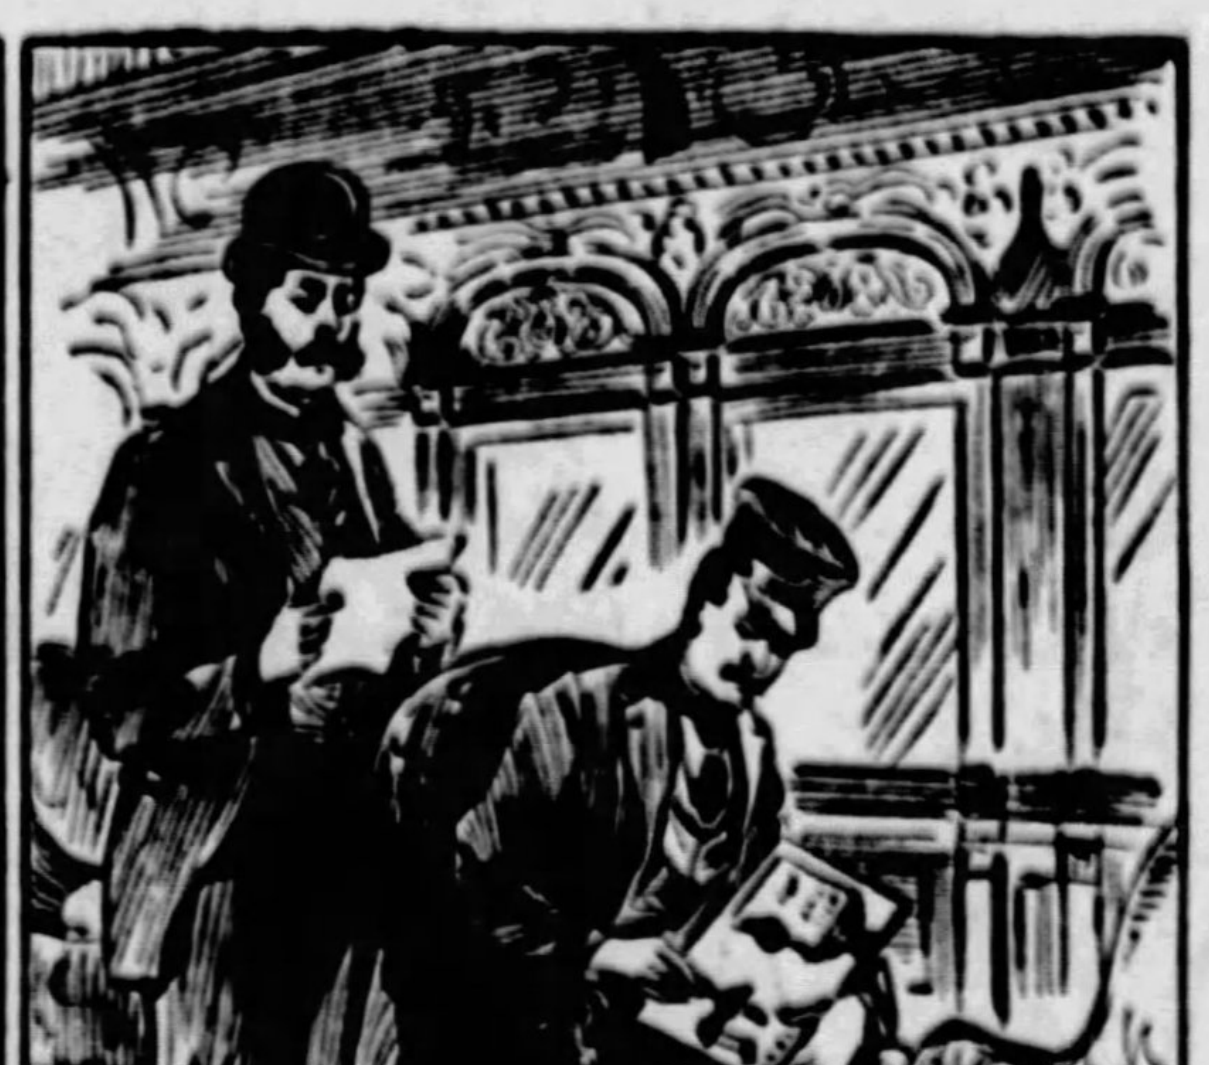
THE phonograph, electric light, motion pictures and storage battery are familiar to all of us. They overshadow the many other Edison inventions, amazing in number and variety. Reviewing with a friend his achievements, Edison remarked: "Say, I have been mixed up in a whole lot of things, haven't I?"



AMONG the "minor" Edison inventions which led to improved devices now in daily use was the electric pen. This was succeeded by the mimeograph. A pointed steel shaft was made to vibrate by a tiny electric motor. The point made perforations in stencil paper as typewriter type now does in the mimeograph.



THE modern megaphone was perfected by Edison. For long-distance work the Edison megaphone had two horns of wood or metal, provided with ear-tubes. Between these was a loud-speaking trumpet, all mounted on a tripod. With this curious device conversation could be carried on at a distance of two miles.



IN 1886 Edison made experiments with wireless telegraphy on moving trains. He put his system into practical use on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The wireless waves passed from a piece of metal on top of the car to the regular telegraph wires, thence to the dispatcher's office.
